LINDBERGH HOPS OFF STARTS PARIS FLIGHT AT 7.52

DAREDEVIL LINDBERGH OFF FOR PARIS! Impatient at delays caused by bad weather young Charlie Lindbergh (left), the Flyin' Fool, favorite in the betting to win $25,000 Orteig prize, took off at 7.52 a. m. in his monoplane, Spirit of St. Louis, for non-stop flight to Paris. Lindbergh got up at 2 o'clock this morning, and at 4.15 had his plane towed from Curtiss Field to Roosevelt Field, where he started on transatlantic air voyage, thus gaining a jump on rivals, Chamberlin and Byrd. Lindbergh is making the trip alone. Top picture shows Lindbergh's plane in flight, and bottom, close-up of plane.

BURY MANIAC'S 44 VICTIMS

Raise Fund In State to Help Bath

BATH, MICH., May 20 (By U. P.).—The town of Bath prepared to bury its dead today.

More than a score of funeral services were to be held here and in surrounding townships—services over children's caskets in nearly all cases.

The death list had increased to forty-four, and of the thirty-six still in hospitals, a few were not expected to live.

Only one consolation came to the stricken town. Its tragic plight had touched the heart of Michigan. The state, responding to an appeal of Gov. Fred W. Green, was raising a fund to remedy the material damage wrought and save the community from bankruptcy.

So great was the grief of the community that it was found impossible to make plans for a community funeral, and it was expected services for the dead would continue tomorrow and Sunday.

An especially tragic service was to be held at Lansing for Mrs. Andrew E. Kehoe, murdered wife of the board member, who, after slaying her, burned his farm buildings, dynamited the school and finally ended an orgy of destruction by dynamiting the automobile in which he sat viewing the havoc he had wrought. Kehoe was believed to have been crazed by financial troubles, complicated by a heavy school tax.

State Offers Aid

Gov. Green's appeal for assistance came in the form of a proclamation, in which he said: "While it is not given us to assuage their grief, we can help in the material problem, assist in the relief and help in the matter of a new school building."

In conjunction with his proclamation, the governor appointed a committee of three citizens with authority to aid the work of the Red Cross in relieving the pressing demand for funds to relieve an almost hopelessly tangled financial situation.

The entire educational program of Bath is at a standstill and W. M. Keyes, secretary of the School Board, has called a special meeting in Bath town hall tonight to consider the pathetic situation. There is but $188 in the general school fund of the township. Teachers' salary bills totaling $3,000 are due today. In addition, there is an outstanding bonded indebtedness of $35,000 on the wrecked school.

"I do not know how far the state ought to go in an appeal to wipe out that bonded indebtedness," the governor said. "But it is my hope that the response to this appeal will be sufficient to restore the wrecked school at least to the condition it was before the explosion. No bereaved family will lack sufficient funds for a Christian burial of its deceased."

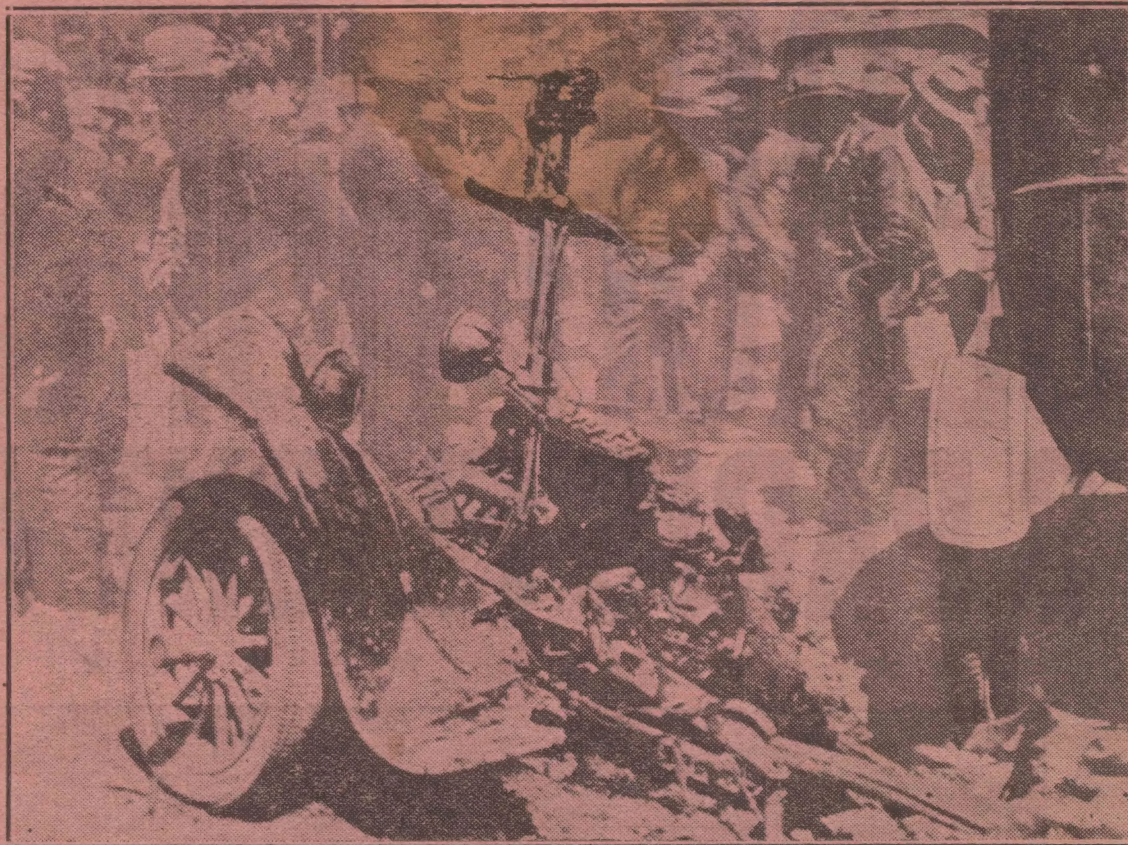

Hold-Up Pair Beat, Rob Lonely Ticket Agent

The two fists of Harry Kennedy, 51, 466 East 189th St., The Bronx, ticket agent for the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad, were not enough to prevent two armed men from robbing the Morris Park station of the railroad early today.

Kennedy put up a battle when the men forced their way into his office, but one of them hit him with the butt of a revolver and knocked him out for the time necessary for them to take $41 from the cash till. Then they fled.

Dr. Chorba of Fordham Hospital treated him for lacerations of the scalp and then he went home.

All That Was Left of Maniac's Car

DYNAMITE USED by Andrew Kehoe, demented farmer of Bath, Mich., to blow up school, killing thirty-seven children, was also used to kill himself and two others, Kehoe setting off a charge in his car, the remains of which are shown above in a picture sent here by telephone.

Dog Famed in Story Missing; May Be Stolen

"Any one with the purchase price may become my owner. But nobody, without my eager and adoring consent, can become my master."

That is article 2 in the creed for dogs, written by Albert Payson Terhune and illustrated with a picture of Monahan, an Irish terrier, which is missing today and sought by his master, William Meloney, Jr., of 457 West 24th St. Monahan is the kind of dog the creed describes, and his master is sure that he is either hurt or being held by some one against his will.

Monahan was the devoted pal of Meloney's father, Col. W. B. Meloney, and stayed by the body of the colonel when he died until his own little frame was almost paralyzed with cold.

DEATH AVENUE PARLEY

Mayor Walker will probably call a conference of engineers who presented the plan for eliminating "Death Avenue" to determine the probable cost in a few days, before he submits the plan to the Board of Estimate next week. City officials appear to believe the expense will be so great that the actual work is yet far in the future.

100,000 Menaced as Flood Sweeps on 5 New Parishes

NEW ORLEANS, May 20 (By U. P.).—The flood waters of the Mississippi struck further southward in the Atchafalaya basin today, driving additional thousands from their homes and bringing the flood menace nearer to five more Louisiana parishes with 100,000 inhabitants.

Brain Specialists Called to Prove Blow Killed Actor

LOS ANGELES, May 20 (By U. P.).—The murder trial of Paul Kelly, screen actor, charged with the murder of Ray Raymond, musical comedy singer, had settled down today to a battle of experts.

Dr. Cecil E. Reynolds, brain specialist, was to resume the stand as a state rebuttal witness to attack the defense contention that Raymond died from a complication of diseases and not from the effects of blows administered by Kelly in a fight over Dorothy Mackaye, wife of Raymond.

Kelly, in his own defense, said: "That his relations with Dorothy Mackaye, wife of the man he is accused of beating to death, were purely platonic."

That he fought Ray Raymond in the latter's home, but only after he had been insulted and because Raymond was the aggressor.

DEMOCRATS TO DANCE

The Haddingway Democratic Club of Brooklyn will give a ball tonight in Trommer's Hall with 2,000 invited guests, including Borough President John Byrne and Mayor Walker. Jack Blau is arranging the entertainment.

$150,000 Bribe Offer To Sharkey

Broadway buzzed today with the story that some "chiseler" representing a "sure thing group" had offered Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey $150,000 to have Sharkey "lay down" to Jimmy Maloney at the Yankee Stadium tonight.

The story is that a stranger went to Buckley's room at the Astor Hotel, called him to the hallway, made the offer, and got a smash in the jaw. He fled before the doughty and outraged manager could repeat.

The attempted bribe, so goes the report, was at once communicated to Tex Rickard, who was indignant. He is quoted as saying that he would lay the matter before the district attorney.

Buckley is said to know the man. Friends of Sharkey say he frothed when told of the offer, and quote him as saying:—

"Like old John L.," he said, "I'm from Boston and on the level. The public can bank on it that such a thing as double-crossing them is unthinkable. I cannot imagine how anyone could have the nerve to suggest such a thing, and I know if the yellow dog hadn't fled that Buckley would have beat him up."

Danseuse Alleges False Charges Cost Her Job and Fiance

Was it a "dance of the Seven Veils" in Salome's best manner or was it detectives' accusations against her that caused Jessie York, Metropolitan Opera House danseuse, to lose her health, reputation, position, as well as fiance?

Miss York, in her $10,000 suit against Peter Bagot and B. Bert Erit, detectives, charges that their statements to the effect she was responsible for a ticket scandal at the Metropolitan is responsible for all her woe. The dance, in the Park Lane home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Forrester, had nothing to do with the matter, she asserts.

Justice Erlanger, in the Supreme Court yesterday, reserved decision on a motion to compel Miss York to file a bill of particulars in her suit. She had claimed that the detectives openly connected her with the theft of opera tickets, with the result that the marriage never did take place.

Hold Writer for Smith Letter Theft

BOSTON, May 20.—Fred H. Thompson, reporter for the Boston Post, was held in $1,000 bail for trial on Tuesday on a charge of grand larceny for the alleged theft of a letter written by Governor Smith of New York from the Rumford Press, Concord, N. H., last April 15.

The letter, written for the Atlantic Monthly, appeared in the Post before the magazine reached the public. Other papers which also printed the letter are the Providence (R. I.) News, New Bedford (Mass.) Times, New York American, New York Daily News and Brooklyn Daily Eagle, against which publishers of the magazine intend to bring suit for damages.

In his letter Governor Smith stated his views as a Catholic in relation to the presidency.

'FLYIN' FOOL' OFF TO PARIS

'Lucky' Lindbergh Hops Off on Ocean Trip Alone At 7.52 as Crowd Cheers

Slithering through the haze which mantled the Atlantic seaboard, Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off from Roosevelt Field, L. I., today in his Ryan monoplane, Paris bound.

The youthful crusader of the air, who prefers to play with death single-handed, seized the first spell of favorable weather since his arrival from the West to gain the jump on his rivals in the overocean flight.

While thousands gathered on the mud-coated field cheered and as automobile sirens screeched a message of good luck, Lindbergh, the Lucky, waved a farewell to the crowd and then disappeared into the rapidly lifting fog, his silvery machine glistening in the early morning sun.

There was no pomp, no set ceremony attending the departure of the youth—he is but 25—for he regarded the great adventure as just another incident in a life al-plane was moved to Roosevelt Field, nearby.

Crowd Throngs Field

He was joined there in a few minutes by J. S. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Airplane Company, builders of the Spirit of St. Louis.

"I'm on my way to Paris," the smiling Lindbergh told Mahoney.

Even at that early hour the field was swarming with flyers and aeronautical experts. Commander Byrd and his crew had been working in the America's hangar throughout most of the night. Not far away mechanics tuned up the Bellanca plane Columbia, landbound by a court injunction to be thrashed out this afternoon.

Wish Flyer Good Luck

Clarence Chamberlin, who is to pilot the Columbia if it makes the flight, wished Lindbergh the best of luck and shook his hand. So did Commander Byrd, Bert Acosta, Lloyd Bertaud and other airmen.

In the meantime a crew were busily engaged in loading the Spirit of St. Louis, which had been drawn out on to the muddy runway. When the last can of gasoline had been poured into the tanks, the plane had a gross weight of 5,150 pounds, 2,250 of which consisted of gas and oil.

Under this handicap it was estimated that the maximum speed of the plane would be 123 miles an hour, cruising speed 106 miles and minimum 69 miles.

Autos Line Roads

The field had become black with people and autos lined the nearby

Lucky Adopts Kitten—For Luck

IF THE FLYIN' FOOL needed a mascot for his getaway today on the hop to Paris, he found it waiting for him yesterday asleep in his plane, the Spirit of St. Louis. So Lucky adopted the little gray kitten, shown with him on the tail of his ship, and called it Patsy—for luck.

roads. Lindbergh, a look of determination on his face, appeared to take but passing interest in the final preparations. Asked if he would talk to reporters, he said:—

C. D. Chamberlin

R. E. Byrd

"There isn't anything they can ask me that I haven't told them already."

It was exactly 7.43 when the lone pilot entered his cabin and the propellers were turned over. Five minutes later Mr. Mahoney, who had been conversing with Lindbergh, stepped from the side of the monoplane and many well known persons rushed forward to encourage the intrepid flyer.

"Good-by, All!"

"God speed, good luck," said Grover Whalen, representative of Rodman Wanamaker, sponsor of the Byrd flight.

"Thank you, good-by, all," replied the serious-faced Lindbergh.

And then, as mechanics removed the blocks from under the wheels, Lucky gave the Spirit of St. Louis the gun.

A mighty cheer arose from thousands of throats when the little plane moved over the rough ground of the runway, slow at first and gathering momentum with a maddening lack of speed.

There was a gasp of disappointment as it seemed that the machine, so weighted, could not make the grade.

Everybody had doubts except the

Flyin' Fool's Plane One-Seater; He Goes "Blind" Course

Capt. Charles Lindbergh's transatlantic plane is a Ryan monoplane, with a 46-foot wing-spread. It is built to carry only one passenger.

The plane can make an average speed of 130 miles an hour.

The pilot's seat is submerged in the cramped cabin so he cannot see out in front, except through two periscopes. He has a clear side view.

The plane is equipped with almost every conceivable instrument to aid navigation. Lindbergh planned to fly "blind," making no attempt to follow his course, except by instruments.

The nose of the plane is hammered aluminum.

The craft is not equipped with wireless.

Warning Against Hop Lauded

By SUTHERLAND DENLINGER
(Copyright, 1927, The New York Evening GRAPHIC.)

Statements contained in the letter of warning which James Vernon Martin, famous airplane designer and pilot, sent to Secretary of Commerce Hoover in protest against the projected three-cornered air race to Paris, were approved today by leaders of American aviation.

Thomas L. Hill, former Royal Air Force pilot and president of the Society for the Promotion of Aviation, not only seconded Capt. Martin's charge that all three transatlantic planes are grossly overloaded but expressed the belief that not one of the ships would arrive at its objective, unless it is "blown across."

Opinion of Flyers

"Capt. Martin has merely placed on record what is the firm opinion

Prisoners Rail At Swindler of Law's Victims

Nick the Barber prided himself on his ability to "fix things" for men under arrest if their relatives would pay him for his trouble, or at least he did until faced with indictments for grand larceny. He couldn't fix that, and so today starts serving from seven to fifteen years in Sing Sing, following his plea of guilty yesterday in Kings County Court.

According to the charges, Nick, officially known as Nicholas Manicone, 34, of 276 Ashford St., Brooklyn, would go to wives and mothers of men under arrest, representing himself as a public official, or as a son of former Judge Palmieri. He would then obtain money, from $100 to $400 in each case, by offering to get the man released through his "pull" with the administration, it was charged.

After Manicone had been returned to jail under sentence, the building rang with the cries of scores of prisoners shouting for "a shot at Nick." During the exercise period Manicone was kept in a remote part of the jail.

ready over-crowded with thrills.

"Don't worry a bit," he told a friend, just before the take-off. "I'll be in Paris tomorrow safe and sound."

The roar of the lone motor in the plane crashed the stillness which had fallen on the grim-faced spectators. Slowly the plane moved down the runway of Roosevelt Field, poked its nose into the air, only to drop back.

Gets Machine in Air

Once more the "Flyin' Fool" shot the Spirit of St. Louis upward and it responded, despite the heavy load, finally clearing the trees which line the field. Then he circled about a few times to gain momentum and at last headed out for the French capital.

The start was officially timed at 7.52 A. M.

Dimmer and dimmer grew the silver speck as it finally faded from view. Five other planes, including Commander Richard E. Byrd's giant plane America, itself waiting to make the same trip, left the ground and flew away as an escort.

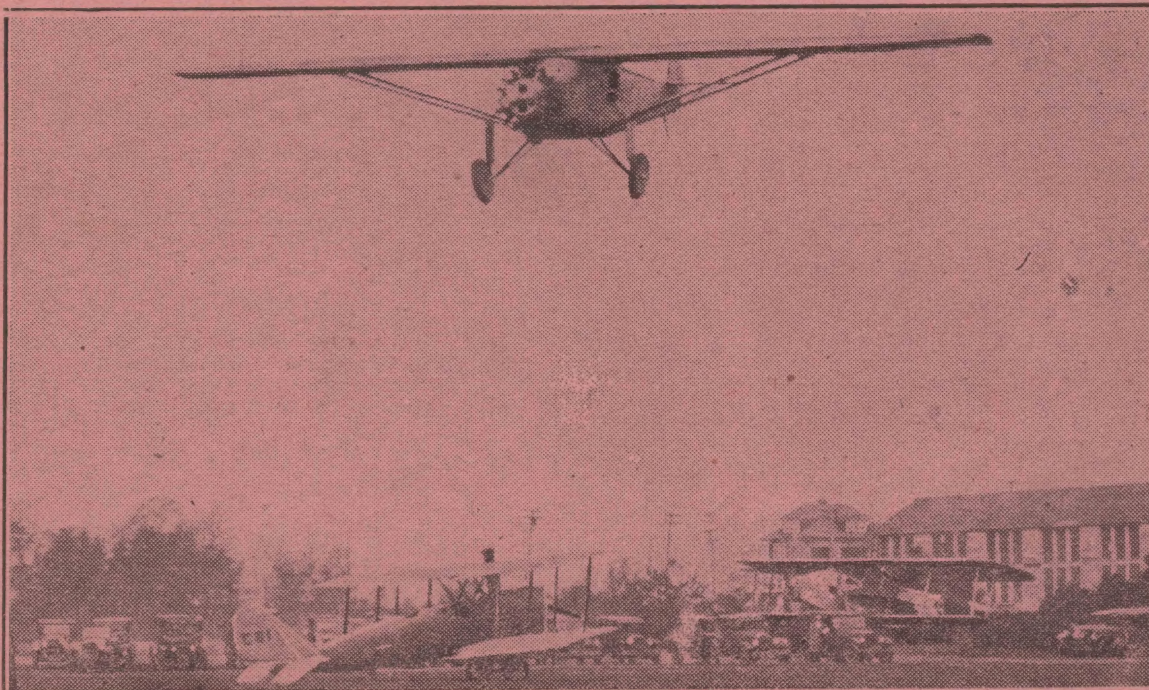

Ships on Lookout

A few minutes later the radio was crackling over the great expanse of water, the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company announcing to all ships on the Atlantic that the flight had started and asking for hourly reports should Lindbergh be sighted.

Two hours' sleep and a sandwich were the only rest and nourishment the dare-devil flyer had in preparation of the start.

With reports from the Weather Bureau that fog and rain, which for days had kept him a virtual prisoner on land, were gradually disappearing, he left the Garden City, L. I., hotel early today and hurried to the hangar at Curtiss Field. Under his directions the

Girl Teacher's Suit Goes to Jury Today

A verdict is expected today in the $50,000 slander suit brought by Miss Helen Clark, the so-called smoking teacher, against Matthew Pechtel, supervising principal of Secaucus, N. J., schools.

She alleges he called her the mother of a child before a class of children.

Miss May M. Thomas, Secaucus school principal, testified that Pechtel entered her classroom and asked her if she was aware that one of the teachers had a baby who was being boarded in Philadelphia. "Miss Helen Clark of P. S. No. 3 is the one, and I am going to make an investigation of it," he continued, according to the principal's testimony.

Four other teachers testifying for Miss Clark all declared Pechtel made similar statements to them.

Miss Clark, who was dismissed from her post two years ago because she smoked cigarettes, declares that Pechtel spread the false report while she was fighting for reinstatement.

Tears rolled down the teacher's cheeks as she answered "No" in reply to a question, "Were you ever the mother of an illegitimate child?"

Pechtel entered a general denial. He admitted he had gone to Philadelphia to investigate and he had been convinced the child in question had nothing to do with the teacher.

Put Man on Stand Who Claims He Saw "Little Augie" Kill

David Wittrack, who identified "Little Augie" as the man who shot Samuel Landman, a picket, on July 7, will testify today when the east side gang leader's trial on charge of first and second degree assault is resumed before Judge Mancuso in General Sessions.

Augie, whose name is Jacob Orgen, 28, is a gangster and a two-term man, the police say. At yesterday's session Augie's wife and the superintendent of the apartment building where he lives at 211 West 106th St. testified that Augie was sleeping at the time Landman was shot.

Martin's Protest On Flight Dangers Wins High Praise

of a great many experienced flyers," he declared.

Hill's attitude was unhesitatingly indorsed by Capt. R. Noble Estey, noted American war-time aviator.

Both discussed the situation with this writer in Hill's office, at 522 5th Ave., where the aviation society head, who recently offered to purchase the Bellanca monoplane from Charles A. Levine for $30,000, had just received a letter from Capt. Martin in which the captain offered to make a transatlantic flight in a plane remodeled to his own design.

In this letter Martin declared that United States Army officers, testifying before a congressional committee, had sworn that a plane of his design could "cross the ocean with 4,000 pounds of bombs, and still have enough gas aboard to interne in Canada after bombing New York city."

Martin's Charge

It was Capt. Martin's contention in his letter to Secretary Hoover that all three projected flights were to be made in airplanes which were obviously not adapted for such a trip, and would be so overloaded that the backers would be potentially guilty of "manslaughter."

Hill told The GRAPHIC he would give Capt. Martin's letter serious consideration before formulating a reply.

He praised the captain's stand, however, and was vehement in his denunciation of the projected flights.

"To my mind none of them will succeed," he declared, "although if any of them do, it will probably be Commander Byrd."

"The fact that the Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, established a world's record for time in the air means nothing in such a venture as a transatlantic flight."

"Why, in Germany a motorless plane—a glider—was able to remain aloft for fourteen and a half hours!"

Belittles Test

"Slow circling over a flying field, with the motor cut down proves nothing. I believe that to deduct 25 per cent. from the Columbia's performance might conservatively give you some idea of how she would function on such a flight under the best conditions. And if she has to buck head winds—well, she will never reach Paris."

"Lucky Charlie Lindbergh," lone flyer, will be "out of luck" this time, Hill thought.

"I doubt if he will be able to stand the strain for more than sixteen hours, aside from other factors," he said. "If he does he's a superman."

While he thought Commander Byrd had the best chance of success, Hill insisted it would be "pure luck" if the daring naval flyer ended his trip successfully.

Ships Aid Chances

"He is carrying a tremendous amount of weight," he said.

"Yes," Capt. Estey broke in, "and there are three men in that plane. Take my word for it, that if one of those three motors cranks (goes bad) he's coming down, no matter where he is."

Both men agreed the fact ships will be on watch increases the

Wanamaker Planning Oversea Passenger Air Service

A regular transatlantic passenger air service is being planned by Rodman Wanamaker from Roosevelt Field.

What is believed to be headquarters for the enterprise is being established, and the work incidental to the conduct of such an undertaking organized. A permanent office, with staff and fixtures, is in process of assembling there, and Anthony Fokker, who designed the America, said last night the route will probably be by way of Newfoundland and that the fare will be on the basis of 25 cents per mile.

chances that the American flyers will escape the fate that befell Nungesser and Coli.

Exaggerated statements regarding the efficiency of airplanes have their effect upon the public mind, but are bad for the progress of aviation, Hill declared.

Told that changes in the Columbia which will permit her landing gear to be dropped had been made, he said dryly:—

"That's why we stipulated in our offer to purchase the ship that she be examined first by our own pilots. 'I am afraid that with the gear weakened that way it will buckle when she attempts to take off under the full load."

As yet Secretary Hoover has made no reply to Capt. Martin's letter. The full text of that belligerent airman's offer to make a "safe and sane" fifth entry in the transoceanic race, which so far, he claims, has been a mere gamble with fate, is printed below:—

"Dear Mr. Hill:—

"I notice in press notices that you have some associates who are interested in the transatlantic flight. "I have taken a great interest in this project since December, 1911, when I interested Lord Northcliffe in offering a prize, which was announced later, and finally won. The following may interest you:—

"I maintain, as shown in the Congressional investigation, and corroborated by all the government technical experts, that no plane of the designs such as are now being

Vincent Murphy Boomed for G. O. P. Vice-Chairman

Vincent H. Murphy, former state controller, is being considered by Republican leaders for the position of vice-chairman of the Republican State Committee. Should Mr. Murphy accept, he would be in line for the chairmanship of the state organization, in the event that George K. Morris, the present chairman, decides to withdraw from the position next spring.

The impression prevails in Republican circles that Mr. Morris will retire when the committee meets next spring, as he has not been in good health. Leaders have brought forward the names of Fred Hammond of Syracuse, clerk of the Assembly and up-state manager for James W. Wadsworth, Jr., and former State Senator Parton Swift of Buffalo, as possible candidates.

Since Mr. Murphy was defeated for re-election as state controller last fall he has moved to New York to become associated with the investment house of Hambleton & Co.

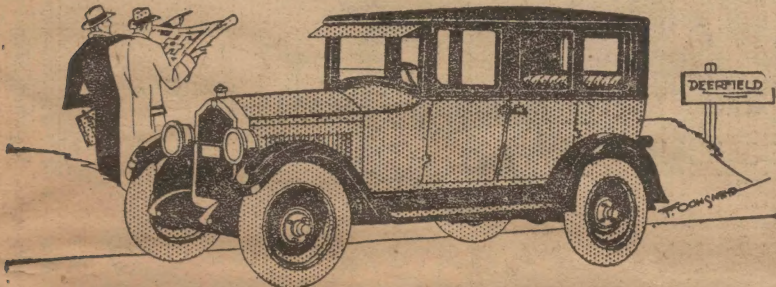

The present vice-chairman of the Republican State Committee is Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler of New York. The intention is to create a new office for a man who could be groomed for the chairmanship.

His attorney declared the former chairman of the Mid-West Refining Company owes the American public no statement at present.

Will Re-Sentence Fuller And McGee May 27

As the Federal government no longer requires the services of Edward M. Fuller and W. Frank McGee, convicted of operating bucket shops, for prosecutions in the Federal courts, they will be re-sentenced to prison on May 27 by Judge Charles C. Hackett of General Sessions.

They pleaded guilty after several trials, when juries were unable to agree on a verdict, but sentence was held up pending their testimony in other cases.

Charles Stoneham Arnold Rothstein

They later gave evidence which resulted in indictments against Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants, and the late William J. Fallon, lawyer, and Arnold Rothstein. Charges based upon their alleged confessions were disposed of without convictions, but the two were not sent to prison because of their importance as witnesses.

Stoneham and Ross F. Robertson face loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars as a result of a verdict in Supreme Court, Justice Ford's decision awarding $2,093 to Robert Harford.

In his suit Harford charged his trading account had been transferred by Charles A. Stoneham & Co., stockbrokers, to Clark & Co., brokers, who later went bankrupt, as part of a conspiracy.

The Harford suit is said to be a test case for 400 other plaintiffs against Stoneham and Robertson, involving $700,000.

TIME FACTOR IN HUNT FOR GIRL KILLER

Bronx Girl, Fiend Victim, Met Fate After Nightfall

The detectives who are searching for the maniac slayer of Yetta Abramowitz, 12, of 883 East 165th St., The Bronx, today must start their search without reliance upon information given them since the girl was found dying on the roof of 1013 Simpson St., The Bronx, last Saturday night. For even the time she left her home has been changed from that given several days ago.

Now, according to the police, the girl's family claims she did not leave until after 6 o'clock that night, an hour which would eliminate the report she had been seen to enter a movie show with a 30-year-old man about 5 o'clock.

Hours of Mystery

The dead girl's activities during the day have been accounted for except about four hours. Several witnesses were found who thought they saw the girl before 6; none has been found to account for the hours between 6 and 10.

In addition, the hope of locating the slayer through the arrest of suspects has apparently failed. Michael de Stefano, 36, who was arrested in Jersey City yesterday and found to have pawned a tan coat of the same type the slayer is believed to have worn, was absolved of any connection with the case by District Attorney McGeehan.

De Stefano was, however, held by the Jersey Criminal Court on a charge of disorderly conduct for a hearing on May 26. Morris Dressler, 17, of 1098 Simpson St., arrested for indecent conduct, is being held in $500 bail for a hearing on that charge on May 27 in Morrisania Court, The Bronx.

The twenty or more other suspects taken by the police have been released within a few hours, however, without legal action.

Attack in Brownsville

Parents in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn were thrown into a state of terror late yesterday afternoon by the attempted kidnaping of a 3-year-old child. A tall man, dark and swarthy, leaped from a sedan and seized little Ida Goldstein a few doors from her home at 330 Hinsdale St.

She had taken but a few steps when her mother, Mrs. Elsie Goldstein, saw the man leap from the car, gather the child in his arms and rush to the basement of the Goldstein home.

The mother followed. In the basement the kidnaper dropped the child as Mrs. Goldstein hurled an empty milk bottle at his head. He dashed from a rear door and escaped with a companion who had waited for him in the car.

Rabiner Explains He Will Pay Notes Ex-Fiancee Signed

Reports that Jules C. Rabiner, convicted bucket shop operator, had left his ex-fiancee, Mrs. Helen V. Myers, holding the bag in connection with a number of notes she signed upon his release, brought word from him today that he was willing to pay them.

In a long distance call from "somewhere in New Jersey" he informed The GRAPHIC that he did not know of the indebtedness and upon learning of it had arranged with his attorneys to adjust the matter. Rabiner also said Mrs. Myers suit against him for $15,000 had been settled out of court.

During Mayor Hylan's administration Rabiner created a sensation when it was discovered that he had enjoyed complete liberty while supposedly serving a sentence for operating a bucket shop. After an investigation he was returned to prison to serve his term. Rabiner is now in business in Newark.

Hone Your Razors! Downtown Barbers Are Planning Strike

Beards are likely to be noticeable in downtown Manhattan from today on, according to Abe Greenwald, chairman of the New York Joint Board of Barbers' Unions. He says 3,000 barbers working below 14th Street are preparing to walk out.

The uptown strike has been settled with the barbers triumphant. They won their demand for $35 a week and 50 per cent. of all intake over $50 and hours from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. weekdays and 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. Saturdays.

Meanwhile, the beauty parlor girls, who are demanding an eight-hour day, closing at 9 p. m. and a percentage of the intake, still are on strike. Only two parlors have met the girls' demands, Sadie Reisch, organizer of the Women's Trade Union, reported.

PRINCETON SUSPECTS 11 ERRING AUTOISTS

The seemingly trivial matter of driving an automobile without permission of the dean has turned out more seriously than expected for eleven Princeton sophomores. For the eleven today are under temporary suspension from college, while others are said to have been suspended for having liquor.

HELD FOR THEFT

Julius Weiss, 27, postman, of Station P, Brooklyn, is held in $1,000 bail for examination June 2, by United States Commissioner McCabe of Brooklyn, on a charge of theft from the mails. Weiss, it is alleged, took $4 in marked bills from the mail in a trap set by post office inspectors.

Navy's Medical Methods Scored By Doctor Gills

The navy's medical methods were subject of a sweeping denunciation by Dr. W. Armistead Gills, U.S.N., retired, yesterday in an address before the Lions' Club at 22 East 38th St. He charged that "antiquated and negligent methods," as well as inexperienced physicians, were largely responsible for the navy's $3,131,596 sick list during 1926.

"It is a mistake to commission recent graduates in medicine, who have not had either hospital training or private practice," he declared. "Besides, they are required to execute many matters, to the negligence of the sick, which could be done by clerks."

"The berth of a navy surgeon would be more attractive with the removal of certain antiquated customs. Capable doctors are infinitely cheaper than pensions and navy hospitals, and in accord with our pre-entrance promises."

"We had the smallest sick list in 1926 since the World War, which cost $3,131,596."

Expert Care Cheaper Than Pensions, He Says

"I Want My Mamma"

LONELY for the mother who disappeared from home May 5, little Sylvester Tulipane, 5, spends most of the time looking out of the window of his grandmother's home at 206 East 77th St., watching for Mrs. Tulipane's return.

Wife Sues Lawyer's Woman Client for $100,000 Damages

The marital troubles a lawyer's wife experiences when her husband has attractive women clients is illustrated by the $100,000 suit brought against Mrs. Olivette Corinne Cartier of Mobile, Ala., by Mrs. Rose Hoffpauir of 1164 Cromwell Ave., The Bronx.

Mrs. Hoffpauir alleges that when her husband, an attorney, went to Mobile to settle Mrs. Cartier's divorce suit he never returned home.

Instead, she says, he and Mrs. Cartier registered in various hotels here as man and wife, and are now in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Hoffpauir yesterday obtained an attachment on Mrs. Cartier's $30,000 home in Hazzard Road, Long Beach, L. I. She has also been granted $60 a week alimony, pending final decision on her separation suit.

BABY, 3, FALLS TO DEATH

$1,500 From Baron Appeals Patricia

Patricia O'Connor, vaudeville actress, and her former husband, the Baron Charles de Grivot de Grandcourt, have settled their difficulties for $1,500. Patricia yielded all claims to further alimony and allowed the present baroness full claim to the title.

It was an amiable conference they had in the office of the baron's counsel, Allen Deutsch, 130 West 42d St. They shook hands and wished each other the best of luck.

NUNGESSER FEARLESS IN AIR DISASTER

Wrecked Engine Nothing New to Missing War Ace

THE "ACE OF ACES"
AS I KNEW HIM

Intimate and heretofore unrevealed secrets of the greatest aviator in the World War as told by the American who knew him best, the president of Arcadia Productions, with whom the flyer was associated for more than a year.

(Copyright, 1927, by New York Evening GRAPHIC. All rights reserved. Reproduction in part or in full forbidden.)

By GILBERT E. GABLE

We have been hearing a good deal lately about the noise and explosion in the White Bird as it hummed across southern Labrador on its way to the States. But I am still undisturbed as to the fate of Charles Nungesser.

It seems like yesterday that another explosion occurred on his plane and I have a queer feeling in my throat, even yet, as I get a mental picture of Nungesser bringing the broken bird to earth, while members of the staff of the French Embassy and a score of army and air mail flyers, stood by with their hearts pounding.

G. E. Gable

Life's Passion

It was in Washington, D. C., just a few months before he went back to Paris. He had come to this country to encourage aviation, which was the passion of his life.

In connection with this purpose we made a motion picture called "The Sky Raider," and Capt. Nungesser toured the United States with two of his war planes under the auspices of the National Aeronautical Society.

When the picture opened in Washington, the captain re-enacted a battle in the sky over Washington monument.

Clouds Lowered

It was a dull day and therefore impossible to fly at great height. There was a little group beside the plane, which included Commandant Georges Thenault, military attaché for aviation upon the staff of the French ambassador.

On the previous evening we had dined with Commandant Thenault and Count Jacques de Sieyes de Veynes. Both had been members of the Nungesser squadron during the war, and Count de Sieyes is himself a famous hero of France.

I remember Commandant Thenault looking rather askance at the lowering sky but the captain glanced at his watch. He knew the park around Washington Monument and the streets of Washington were crowded with thousands of people craning their necks to see him.

Capt. Nungesser turned back to me, grinned in the modest little way he has, and said:—

"They are expecting Nungesser and Nungesser will go."

He stepped lightly into the cockpit of the swift Henriot pursuit plane. His face looked especially white, especially against the dead black leather hood that covered his head. It seemed almost like a death hood, emphasized by the ruff of fur which framed the face and showed at the throat.

"Contact," came in his clear voice from the cockpit, and Sergt. Catelin put his whole weight in one quick down pull on the propeller blade.

Roars Into Sky

There was a sputtering roar and two of the Bolling Field mechanics pulled the blocks from under the wheels; the War Bird went up at an angle steep enough to stall any other plane and any other pilot.

Lieut. Wiess went up in the Potez plane a moment later and as the second hand went around to the stroke of the hour Lieut. Wiess dipped over Washington Monument and "attacked" his captain.

It was thrilling to the last degree. A dozen times the Nungesser plane zoomed into line so that its machine gun could have raked his opponent from stem to stern, and then at the end of the "battle" the lieutenant's plane went into a long tail spin to earth.

But there was another sound which added realism to the watchers. In the last deadly rush of the Nungesser plane something cracked and a sharp sound of an explosion was heard by the watchers on Bolling Field below.

A moment later the sun glinted on a propeller that had stopped and army flyers turned, white-faced, to one another.

Aide Is Calm

"The engine is dead!" cried the mechanic sergeant.

All stood breathless while the captain's plane went into a dizzy tail spin and headed straight for earth.

But of all that crowd I think Nungesser's sergeant was most calm, for he had seen his captain bring down many a plane over the battle line, sometimes with half a wing hanging limp.

When it seemed that in another instant the captain would crash into the treetops, the plane straightened out into a long, sloping glide and he landed just at the edge of the field, a full mile from Washington Monument!

One of the air mail flyers shrugged. "It's as near a miracle as I ever saw," he said.

Engine Wrecked

For my own part I knew that it was not a miracle—it was Nungesser.

A connecting rod had broken and one of the cylinder heads gave way and the piston tore its way through to the engine casing so that the

Healthy Girlhood's Exquisite Complexion

A normal healthy skin is smooth of texture and devoid of all skin blemishes. Blackheads, enlarged pores, scales, pimples and red spots are repulsive and indicate negligence in caring for the skin. If the health and beauty of your skin is impaired by those ugly defects peel them off with pure mercolized wax.

This can be done secretly and quickly at home. By the process of absorption the wax gently but surely removes the unsightly mark in small, almost invisible particles, until the spotless beauty of the underneath skin is revealed.

Mercolized wax is a most extensively used facial rejuvenator. You will like it. At all drug stores and beauty counters. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty.

Brokaw-Lowell Wedding Smart Social Event

New York society is settling into the general routine of the "little social season," for its most important event, the marriage of Miss Julia Brokaw of 984 5th Ave. and James Russell Lowell of 300 Park Ave., took place yesterday in St. Thomas Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell are descendants of old colonial families. Mrs. Lowell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw, is a descendant of Bourgeon Broucard, who settled in America in 1675. Mr. Lowell is a great-grandson of the poet, James Russell Lowell. They sail on the Homeric tonight on their honeymoon.

A reception at the Brokaw home followed the ceremony. Among the guests were Clarence H. Mackay, Mrs. Frederick C. Church, Sir T. Ashley and Lady Sparks, Major Barclay H. Warburton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann and Judge James A. Lowell.

23 Girls Face Charges in Raid

Probation officers today are busy probing into the records of twenty-three girls who will be arraigned before Magistrate J. Jean Norris tomorrow won charge of "associating with vile and vicious characters."

The girls, all white, were taken in a raid on Harryland, a dance hall at Columbus Avenue and 64th Street. They were dancing, raiders said, with Japanese and Filipinos. Pending the investigation, the girls are in Jefferson Market prison.

Another feature of the celebration will be a banquet to be held Tuesday at the Hotel Roosevelt, 45th Street and Madison Avenue. This will be sort of a re-union for old time east siders. Gov. Smith, himself a former St. James parishioner, will be at both events.

Assemblyman Peter J. Hamill is chairman of the centennial celebration arrangements committee.

Harry Richman, Will Mahoney, Belle Baker, Julius Tannen, Keller Sisters and Lynch, the Lucas Sisters and many others will make up the entertainment program.

Edward J. Kenny Feted by Catholic Big Sister Group

Edward J. Kenny, recently knighted by Pope Pius XI. in the Order of St. Gregory, was tendered a reception last night by the Catholic Big Sisters, at the Little Theater on St. Felix Street, Brooklyn. Miss Helen P. McCormick, president of the organization, presided.

Kenny was honored for the boxing show he promoted last year for the Catholic Big Sisters out of which $79,000 was turned over to the cause.

On June 15, at the Polo Grounds, Kenny will promote another show, this one for the Catholic Boys' Clubs, featured by a six round match between Ruby Goldstein and Sid Terris.

REALLY, folks, what a fool I'd be to sell a customer furniture that I couldn't recommend whole-heartedly in every respect! I've been in the cash and credit furniture business for 12 years and I expect to be here many years more. Every piece of household furniture that I sell I guarantee will give years of service and I can't afford to have any patron say anything but the kindest things about my furniture, because furniture is all I sell!

I'm not afraid to tell my customers NOT to buy certain kinds of furniture. It may not be suitable for their home. Experience may show that it is not as desirable as other types—that it is not as comfortable, or as convenient, or as substantial, or as well made, or as stylish. Perhaps, even, it's too massive and elaborate to be in good taste in a simple home.

My customers know that they can rely on my advice. It is given with my customer's interests in mind, and that's why my business has grown and grown until it has extended far beyond my neighborhood and has become city-wide.

Public Aids Caruso Family With Father in Death House

Things are beginning to brighten for the family of Francesco Caruso, who have been pushed to despair by ill luck. Caruso remains in the death house, two of his children are in the grave, three are ill, but, with all that, things are growing better.

The public is beginning to come to the family's aid. Already the Caruso Defense Committee has acquired the services of Clarence Darrow to appear for Caruso when the latter's case comes before the Court of Appeals next fall.

Caruso was sentenced to death for having murdered Dr. Caspar Pendola because he believed the antitoxin serum administered by the doctor had caused the death of his 6-year-old boy, Joey.

Mrs. Caruso went to Sing Sing from Grantwood, N. J., yesterday and told him that the public has come to her help. A neighbor, Richard Fox, paid the funeral expenses of their 4-month-old baby, Ida, who died several days ago. Others had bought food and in other ways relieved the privations in the home of Mrs. Caruso's father, whither they were driven by poverty.

Caruso, who can neither read nor write and who does not understand English, is kept apprised of his family's affairs through Gus Nappe, another death house prisoner, who speaks both Italian and English.

The address of the Caruso committee is 1133 Broadway. There will be a benefit show for the family at the Royal Theater, 165 Bowery, tomorrow night. Arthur Garfield Hays and Representative Fiorello La Guardia will speak.

Martin's Protest Highly Praised

prepared for the flight can possibly make the flight without very dangerous overloading. This overloading amounts to over 100 per cent. I understand that the Bellanca will be loaded twenty-two to twenty-three pounds per square foot, and will not have the actual mileage, but must have a westerly wind.

The other planes will be correspondingly overloaded. Byrd's about twenty-four pounds per square foot. Sikorski was about twenty-six pounds per square foot, and both his job and that of Davis crashed through the weight forcing a path through the air of the aerofoil which produced a critical angle.

Safe Type Plane

"I have in the Eastern states a plane and equipment which can easily and safely be converted to the MP type. This is the type which has been certified by the world's leading laboratories as capable of a full scale gliding angle of twenty to one, and about which the United States Army experts swore before Congress that it could cross the ocean with 4,000 pounds of bombs and still have enough gas aboard to interne in Canada after dropping the bombs on New York city. There is nothing whatsoever experimental about the plane, and it can be made ready before the best weather comes—July 1 to 15.

"Please bear in mind that the overloading of the present type plane not only makes the getaway dangerous, but greatly lowers the plane's speed for about five to seven hours.

"The MP type I could supply will not require one pound of overloading and will therefore have the full 125 m.p.h. and will have 5,000 miles range.

"Now, nothing would please me more than to see one of the brave attempts succeed, and I hope the first one of them, but I must predict failure for all these attempts.

"So why not organize around this MP plane? Please let me know, in any case, what you think, and in case you are interested I can send you some data.

"Shall make flight as either pilot or navigator if wanted.

What it's all about

By PAUL ALLEN

A SUDDEN DESIRE TO HOP across the Atlantic has come upon readers of this column. I haven't been able to figure out what it's all about, unless they are all driven to distraction by reading "What It's All About." Anyway, here's what R. J. R. of this city writes: "I am an American, in spite of which I make no claim to superior courage. But I firmly believe that if I knew sufficient about the running of an airplane I would not hesitate to attempt a transatlantic flight. All of this fear about weather conditions that so long held up professional flyers seems to me to be an indication of lack of sufficient nerve."

AND RIGHT HERE IS WHERE I am going to disagree violently and without regard to consequences. Any aviator who hops out over the ocean into bad weather is taking an expensive way to commit suicide. One can drown oneself just as thoroughly without taking a $25,000 airplane down to destruction.

I KNOW RATHER INTIMATELY several leading aviators in this section of the United States. I asked one of these yesterday why he didn't join the transatlantic glory grabbers. "I don't want to die just yet," he replied. "Is it as dangerous as that?" I asked. "More," was his answer.

THEN SAID I TO HIM: "IF YOU had to go what would you do?" "I'd stay right here." "But supposing—" "Oh, well, if I had to hop or be shot for not hopping, I'd take my chance on hopping. What I'd do would be to sail my little airplane as high as she'd climb, as quickly as I could before pointing East. From 20,000 or 30,000 feet up you can spot the smoke of a steamer a long way off. You can also coast from 75 to 100 miles before you hit the water. At the first sign of trouble I'd head for the nearest smoke, and some steamship would find itself with an extra passenger aboard. If things went wrong at night I'd pray as hard as I knew how and trust to heaven to put me where some ocean liner would run me down."

"DON'T LET'S KID OURSELVES about this ocean flying business. Airplanes made today aren't equipped for hops to Paris. They're not strong enough, nor big enough, nor have they carrying capacity enough. They're no better risk than a canoe would be for crossing the English Channel on a stormy day in February. Anybody who tries to fly from here to France is entitled to all the credit he can get. You can call him brave if you like. I think of him by a different word." ... And that is the opinion of a man who was decorated for his work as an officer in a machine gun company over there and who has since made several sensational records as an aviator.

E. A. J., ON THE SAME SUBJECT, writes: "Why all this hero stuff about this trip to Paris stunt? There are probably a million young men, including myself, who would jump at the chance of piloting an airplane across the ocean." Quit clowning, E. I have my doubts about the nerve of a man who fails to sign his name to letters he writes to newspapers.

Flyin' Fool Gets Jump on Rivals in Race for N. Y.-Paris $25,000 Prize

LINDBERGH TAKES OFF! Early this morning, while surrounding hamlets were wrapped in slumber and rivals least expected it, Charlie Lindbergh, perhaps the most daring of all modern daredevils, took off for non-stop flight to Paris. Pictured above are some of the thousands of rooters who wished him luck at flying field.

(Photo Graphic.)

$25,000 SMILE? Ever since his two-day flight across the continent to enter New York-Paris competition, young Lindbergh has reigned the favorite in betting to win the $25,000 prize. He smiled confidently as he took off this morning.

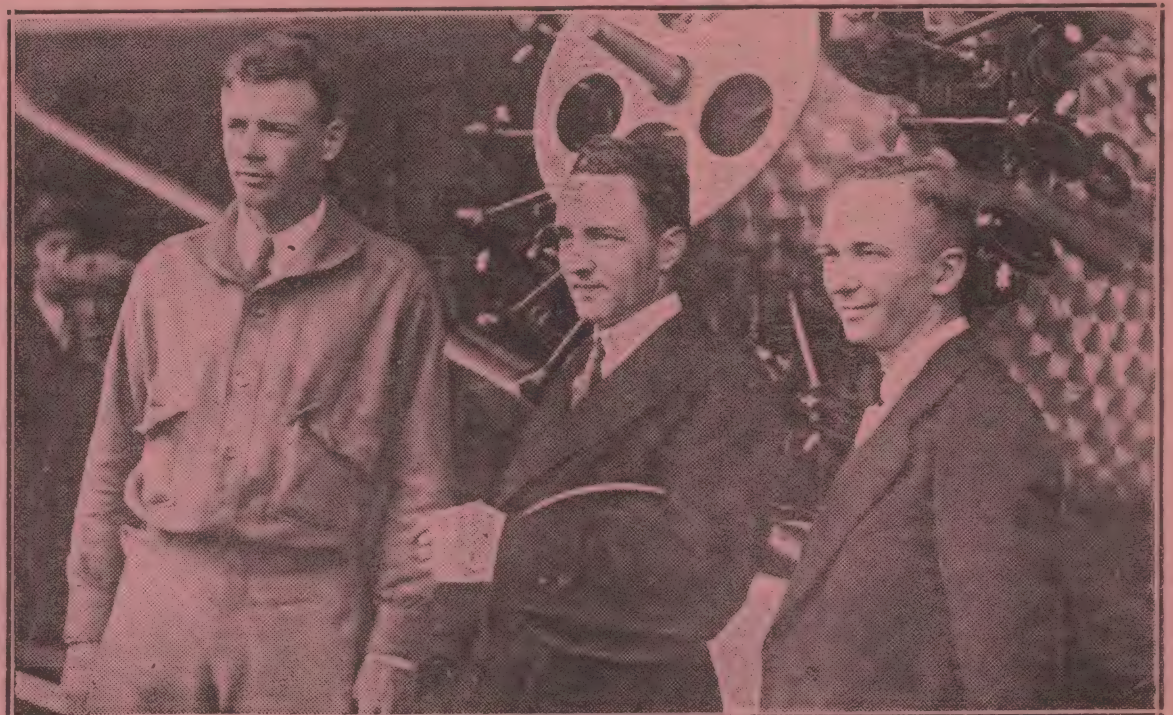

TESTING ENGINE. Up at 2 o'clock this morning, the Flyin' Fool tested his engine for last time, had his gas tanks filled and was towed from Curtiss Field for Roosevelt Field, where he started on non-stop air voyage to Paris. His action was complete surprise to everybody, as it was thought bad weather would block his flight for forty-eight hours.

(Photo Graphic.)

"GOOD LUCK, SON!" This was message of Lindbergh's mother, who came to New York from Detroit to wish him success on the proposed flight. She remained long enough to have dinner with him and then returned to her home. "I have the utmost confidence in him," she told reporters.

RIVALS TO FOLLOW FLYIN' FOOL.

Charlie Lindbergh (left) is well on his way toward Paris by this time, but Commander Byrd (center) and Clarence Chamberlin (right) won't be far behind. Chamberlin may start tomorrow, if dispute about who'll pilot his plane is settled. Byrd expects to take off Sunday.

J. Pluvius Crashes Gate At Belmont Park Opening

A DEBUTANTE'S DAILY LETTER

The Most Entertaining Society Column in New York

New York, May 20

Sue, dear:—

Of course it would rain yesterday.

It just had to rain. Weren't there seemingly dozens of things that we had planned to do outdoors, and wouldn't this be too much of a temptation to old Jupe Pluvius?

Julia Brokaw's wedding would have been enough. The weather man loves to weep on big weddings. It gives him such a sense of importance. And a nice dark wedding day is such a cheerful omen of years to come—unless the newlywed James Russell Lowells take things by opposites.

Mudders' Paradise

And then there was Belmont Park.

It never fails to rain on the opening day of the spring races. And usually there are lots of optimistic individuals who plan to have lunch out under the trees of the Turf and Field Club. And always they have to eat inside.

This year it wasn't quite so bad as usual. The new pavilion was very much in operation. It's one of the most interesting of the additions that Joseph Widener and Henry W. Bull planned for the clubhouse.

It's an octagonal affair, with windows that are almost like those in the pavilion of the Bois de Boulogne, and you can sit eating there and watch the little lake and the tall cedars of the garden—and you can be protected from the pouring rain of days like yesterday.

The club is very French, anyway, having been built by a close friend of Louis Philippe back in the early days of the last century. They've tried to keep the original flavor of the old place in the remodeling, and they've done a pretty good job of it.

But speaking of rain. There were still other affairs that got a ducking yesterday. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the New York Zoological Society picked out yesterday for its annual garden party up at the Bronx Park Zoo, but the garden party turned into a mere tea party in the Administration Building, with Mrs. Fairfield Osborn trying to make the best of it.

Jupe, the Gate Crasher

One of the regular garden afternoons had been planned for yesterday too, when the George Bullocks were to throw open their grounds out on Centre Island for all those who wanted to inspect them. A great many of the Long Island estates, especially those that have unusual gardens, have been planning to show them to the public on certain afternoons for the sake of charity. The Wayside Home for Girls is getting the proceeds.

There's to be another chance for the public to see a big estate tomorrow. Planting Fields, the William Robertson Coe place out at Oyster Bay, is to be on display. Let us hope that the regular Saturday rain will not be among those present.

Ruth's Blond Hair Turning Brunet In Prison Cell

Ruth Snyder, daughter of the Vikings, is not a natural blonde. The flame of her tresses, which won her the title of Flaming Ruth during her trial for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, in their Queens Village home on March 20, with Henry Judd Gray as her accomplice, is fading. She is becoming a brunette.

The statement Wednesday from Sing Sing, where she and her erstwhile innamorata are in the death house awaiting electrocution, that bleaches, hair dyes and other toilet lotions would be denied her there, was supplemented yesterday by another and more convincing declaration from the prison.

Ruth's True Colors

The statement came from Principal Keeper John J. Sheehy, who has had Ruth and Judd under observation since her arrival. Sheehy says Ruth is beginning to show her true colors—that is, so far as her hair is concerned.

The flame is turning to jet.

"Yes, I have watched her pretty carefully," Sheehy declared. "Mrs. Snyder's hair is rapidly turning black. Since she has been here I have noticed that in the waves there is a deeper color underneath the blond edges. If it is not black, certainly it is dark brown."

Both Ruth and Judd have been model prisoners at Sing Sing. The fact is somewhat disappointing, for keepers expected both would seek special privileges, as is the case with most inmates who are sent there after sensational trials, such as that in which both figured in the Queens county court house a fortnight ago.

Model Prisoners

Neither has made any requests. Judd chats occasionally with fellow prisoners in the tier where he is located, and Ruth keeps very much to herself with her magazines and books and the few letters that have been delivered to her.

Ruth and Judd had no visitors yesterday, although it was expected that Mrs. Brown, Ruth's mother, would make the trip to see her daughter.

Today a sanity expert will visit Mrs. Snyder in the death house. Dr. Raymond F. C. Keib, state commissioner of correction, will be at the jail this morning and will talk with both Ruth and Judd in their cells. While there is nothing in the conduct of the pair to indicate any mental disturbance, should Dr. Keib detect any unusual development he will report his findings to the State Lunacy Commission.

Chicago Woman Gets Chair in Crime Like Mrs. Snyder

CHICAGO, May 20 (By U. P.)—For the first time in almost five years a woman today faced a death sentence for murder in Chicago.

A jury in Judge Philip Sullivan's court, after three hours' deliberation, convicted Mrs. Katherine Cassler of the murder of William Lindstrom to get $7,500 insurance. "We recommend the death sentence," the jury's verdict read.

Mrs. Cassler slumped in her chair but was quickly revived. Her mother collapsed and was carried from the courtroom.

Mrs. Cassler was found guilty mainly on the testimony of Loren Patrick and Mrs. Lillian Fraser, both of whom admitted complicity in the murder and pleaded guilty. Patrick testified Mrs. Cassler paid him about $150 to do the killing.

The case bore some similarity to the recent Gray-Snyder case in New York. Mrs. Cassler accused Patrick of the murder, while Patrick blamed it on her.

MEXICAN COP SHOOT AT CALLES' SON IN ROW

NOGALES, SONORA, MEXICO, May 20 (By U. P.)—An alleged attempt to assassinate Rodolfo Calles, son of President Calles of Mexico, resulted from a row between the youth and a policeman, who charged the President's son with speeding, it is reported. During the argument, it was said, the policeman shot twice at Calles, the first bullet grazing his shoulder.

Solution to Yesterday's Cross-Word Puzzle

How To EARN MONEY at HOME

By Sara Spence

I have a friend who writes that her husband will not allow her to work openly. He is in the city's pay and fears that it may hurt his position. Also he feels ashamed to let her go to work. What ought she to do? They are behind with their rent. I think I can see both sides of this situation. One way would be for the wife to select an occupation that will make her husband proud of her. Such an occupation might be story-writing, interior decorating, the making of fine foods for special trades, the working out of an idea—like making portable kitchenettes. It all depends on what you can do—don't you think so?

I have just returned from my first voyage. You got me a job as hostess on an Eastern cruise. I want to thank you for helping me. I got my expenses and a salary and a permanent engagement. MRS. G. After all, you really did it yourself. Don't forget to have plenty of clothes. That is one of the attractive features about a hostess—a number of changes.

I am willing to go into partnership in the mail order business. I have the money. I am sincere. F.

I am so sorry that I cannot print real names here. I wish you would put a little "ad" in the paper. I am not suggesting that you spend money. Less than a dollar would be sufficient. And it would get you in touch with the persons you want to reach, I think.

What is there I can do that is absolutely new and not at all difficult? I can't leave home? MARIGOLD.

I think I have a new line for you—though you may say that you have heard of it before. Try making coffee bags—for those who still boil their coffee, and many people like boiled coffee. Put into each bag just enough coffee for two cups. These can be sold by the dozen just as tea bags are sold. And of course you know about the little bags of tea that are used for afternoon teas—and for everyday use for that matter.

Oh, how I do thank you for urging me on to do hand-painted things! I make little caps, great big hand bags, lovely neck scarfs—all from muslin or silk. And I hand-paint them. They sell like hot cakes. H. D.

There is no limit to this sort of thing. The hems of blouses and the crowns of the big straw hats both offer opportunities. I suggest a bob cap that matches a hat and can be worn with it.

I want to build up a business painting scarfs and handkerchiefs. I can do beautiful work.

STRATFORD.

I earnestly advise you to put all your energy into making bob caps. These are worn over bobbed hair to keep the curl in. If pretty they will do for breakfast wear and for auto-mobiling. I saw some charming ones. Make them of net, muslin, silk and of crocheted straw.

I have a good face cream as you know. And, following your hints, I have worked up a little trade. But it doesn't bring enough. D.

Combine other cosmetics with it. I think a liquid to keep the hair in curl accompanied by a little Bob Cap would sell. The more articles you handle the better your chance for making money.

CHILDREN'S CAMP SUE FOR INJURIES TO GIRL

Edwin Fast and his wife, Jennie, who operate a children's camp at Hunter, N. Y., are defendants in a suit for $50,000 damages filed by the mother of 12-year-old Norma Leff of 3001 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn. The mother charges that Norma is losing her eyesight as the result of being cut by flying glass when other children kicked a football through a sun porch window at the camp last summer.

MAN to MAN by Top Hat

A letter from far off Michigan is entitled to an immediate answer and consequently we are going to get right to business in regard to the inquiry of John K. B. of the city of Jackson, that state.

"Please tell me what the well-dressed man will wear this summer, including ties, hats and kerchiefs and the cut of the suit," writes John K. B., who also wants to know if a double-breasted suit is fashionable this summer.

And so we shall begin at the top—with hats. We have described already, in previous columns, the type straws that are most fashionable—medium crowns and brims—medium coarse sennets, with the great majority of the better dressers favoring the black band.

The approved summer suit colors are gray, blue and light twill mixtures, the three-button peaked and notched lapel being more popular than the two-button and double-breasted jackets, or brass buttoned breasted model, particularly in blue, is still good and always has been, chiefly because it is worn with a variety of trousers and waistcoats. Colored and striped flannel trousers are more popular than ever—grays and blue or black hair stripes—all are being worn with blue double-breasted jackets, or brass buttoned yachting coats.

Solid color Oxford shirts, in pastel shades, with starched separate collars or with soft attached collars, are being worn at the smartest places everywhere, as are the new pleated bosom semi-stiff shirts in stripes and checks.

Solid color neckwear is still the order of the day, santung, satin and faille being the most popular materials, with poplin a close fourth. Also, neckwear with small designs, self-color dots and small indistinct figures are good.

Breast-pocket kerchiefs are being worn to match the neckties or to harmonize with the ties and shirts. And lisle socks, in plaids and overplaids, are also being worn with an eye to a perfect color ensemble.

Fancy footwear is more popular than ever and ranges from the natural colored pigskin golf shoe to the tan cordovan, with the black saddle, and taking in such combinations as brown calf with white kid inserts and contrasting stitching, to white kid with patent leather toes.

For sport, the well dressed man will wear a turned down lightweight felt, a Panama or leghorn hat, solid color pullover sweater, with solid color golf hose to match, a plain colored jacket, in gray, tan, or a light mixture, which harmonizes in color with checked, plaided and overplaid plus three creaseless knickers. Blazer stripe neckwear is especially popular with the sports costume, and the sports tiepin, a miniature crop, tennis racket, or golf club, is again the fashion.

And that, in brief, is what the well dressed man will wear this summer.

Your MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

By Patricia Lee

(Copyright, 1927, by New York Evening GRAPHIC. All rights reserved.)

Wives sometimes complain that the duties of home become monotonous, and in constantly demanding a change, start the first rift in the clouds of matrimony. Marriage is something one goes into voluntarily—or supposedly so—therefore the sacrifice it requires should be weighed beforehand and cheerfully accepted. This is the advice that Louise H. needs and, let us hope, will heed.

Says the WOMAN

Dear Patricia Lee:—

I have been married for five years and my husband does not seem to get anywhere. He has had only one increase in salary since our marriage, and other men in the shop where he works seem to get along in the world while he stands still. With me it is always drudgery of housework, with seldom an evening at the movies. Sunday he is too tired to go out, and after working all the week I do not want to sit around the house—especially these lovely days. I would be greatly comforted by a word from you.

LOUISE H.

Does it ever occur to you that your husband might feel the same way about his work—that he also might be discouraged, yet does not complain for fear that it will make you unhappy? There may be some reason behind his failure not to succeed. It may be his health; it may be that the long delay in the expected salary increase has caused his morale to drag.

The best thing to do to brighten his spirits is to get him out, especially during the evening and on Sundays. The sunshine and air will brighten his spirits and make him feel more ambitious. During your walks talk things over with him and try to reach a better understanding. Probably he is so engrossed in his own problem that he does not think of yours. The situation is not difficult. It simply requires that you go ahead and tell him frankly what you think will effect a change.

Seems as if every little family has a problem of its own. If it is not finances, it is the children; if not the kiddies, then the "in-laws." It really does require tact to be happy though married—but it can be done. And it is being done every day—simply by both husband and wife doing their best. The problem of James G.—is the problem of other men.

Says the MAN

Dear Patricia Lee:—

We live comfortably because I have a nice little business of my own and there are no children. But this is my problem. I adore my mother, and my father has always been a real pal to me. Both are quite old—yet, whenever I want to do something to make them happy, there's a family row. "We cannot afford it," the wife insists. On the other hand, if her mother or sisters have a birthday or any other anniversary, she is terribly upset if I do not run my legs off shopping for gifts for them. When I call this fact to her attention, she says that I am stingy and unreasonable. What would you do under the circumstances?

JAMES G.

I would quietly put a little money aside and as long as I knew my wife's attitude, I would purchase my gifts for my family without making it a matter of discussion with her. There are many wives like that, and it is difficult to make them realize that they are unreasonable. One husband broke his wife of her narrow-mindedness by remembering her mother's anniversary and buying gifts beforehand—reminding her of the event to come. She was so taken by surprise that she never objected after that to what he did for his relatives. In this way they reached a common ground of understanding and all goes well.

Patricia Lee answers questions every day relating to problems of married life. Names and addresses should be added to letters as a mark of good faith, but will not be published in the paper. Write to Patricia Lee, in care of The GRAPHIC, 25 City Hall Place.

THE BIBLE STORY IN PICTURES—

The Giants of Old.

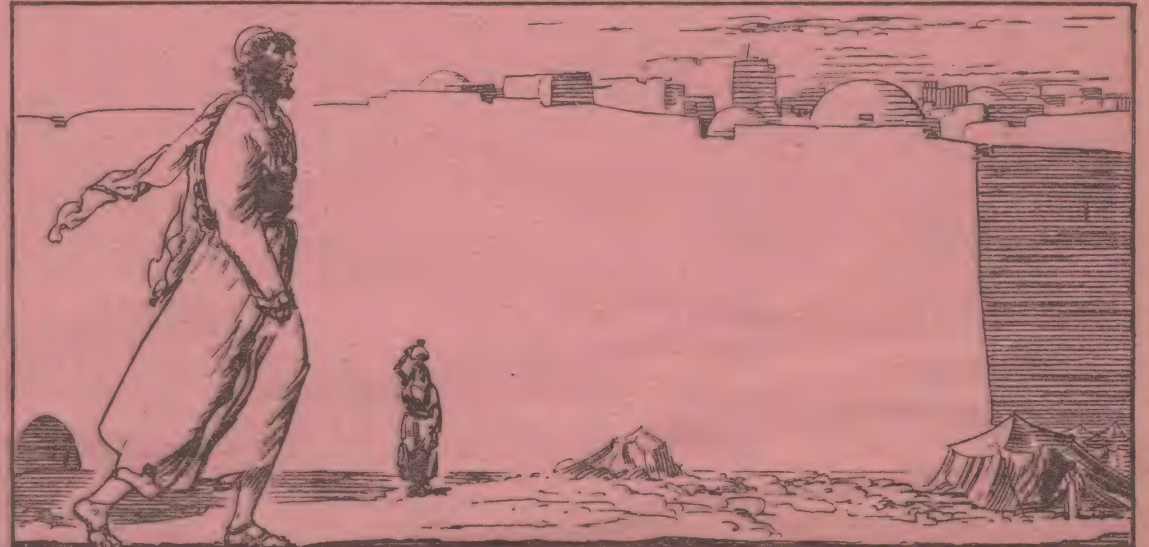

By Kor

And Methuselah begat Lamech; and all the days of Methuselah were 960 and nine years; and he died. And Lamech lived an hundred and eighty-two years, and begat a son; And he called his name

Noah, saying, this same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground which the Lord hath cursed. And Noah was 500 years old; and Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth. And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all they chose. There were giants in the earth in those days; and when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

Your Birthday

by STELLA

MAY 20

HERBERT DRUCE

This is the birthday of Herbert Druce, now acting on Broadway in "The Play's the Thing." Mr. Druce was born when the Sun was still in Taurus, but just preparing to pass into Gemini, where Jupiter awaited him, and was already merging his rays with those of the Sun. The conjunction of Jupiter with the Sun, as most of my readers know, is always an indication of success and power. Mercury was strongly fortified in his own sign, Gemini, giving both versatility and memory. Venus was with Neptune in enterprising and entertaining Aries, which denoted great dramatic talent, especially as both were on good terms with practically all the other planets. Other outstanding features of this horoscope are the foresight and honesty of purpose shown by Saturn, the imagination acterization indicated by the Moon's position. Altogether it is an interesting and successful horoscope.

If you were born between May 20 and 24 you are a combination of Taurus and Gemini, and in disposition you are probably rather nervous and restless. You are extremely capable, however, for you combine the stability of Taurus with the versatility and quickness of thought of Gemini. Many successful artists, inventors, orators and writers have been born under this combined influence, which adds to the pliability of Taurus and at the same time helps to subdue the Gemini restlessness. One of the greatest faults of the Geminian temperament is the inability to concentrate and in this the Taurus influence is of great help. Gemini is highly gifted, and when able to concentrate its forces is capable of great achievement.

CLOTHES FOR BABY

I am the mother of five children, four boys, 2, 4, 6 and 8 years of age, and a little girl, 7. I am expecting another baby in June and have no clothes ready. My husband makes a very small salary and we have all we can do to provide food for them. I don't know what I will do when the baby comes. If some kind reader could send me a layette or some outgrown baby clothes I would be very grateful.

ILL AND DISCOURAGED

I am a widow with a boy 12 years of age. I am not very strong and my earnings are very small, as I am unable to work regularly. I would appreciate anything in the way of clothing for my boy and myself. I wear size 40-42. MRS. ANNE G.

CAST MORE MEDALS!

To the Editor of The GRAPHIC:—The men that went over to the World War in the Canadian army get a bonus, but the man that was willing to go but could not pass the doctor got nothing. Now, do you or your readers think that it is fair that if I passed the doctor I would have gone over the top, as the boys say, and got a sum of money? Now, do you not think that the men that offered to go and could not pass the doctor should get some kind of a token or medal as well as the boys that went over?

EXPOSE EXECUTION

To the Editor of The GRAPHIC:—I was only a half-hearted supporter of capital punishment until I read a vivid description of it in yesterday's GRAPHIC, fully convincing me of its savagery. Capital punishment is a vicious circle. If it is justice, then should not whole mobs of lynchers and death-dealing judges and executioners suffer the same penalty?

A suggest that The GRAPHIC institute a public slaughter house museum, exhibiting the chair and gallows, with many of the ancient instruments of torture and many drawings (colored) of the victims in every stage of their suffering, including the butcher shop, or dissecting room, and portraits of the "innocent victims" of the imbecility of the law. Then, to further the propaganda, this museum should publish pamphlets for those too distant to visit it.

This plan, if given a chance, will mirror to society the savage muck upon its face, leading it to a sane and healthy wash-up.

I believe this a sensible method for combating savagery in society. Had I the money I would gladly sacrifice it and my time to this cause. ANTHONY FIORILLO. 113 Washington Place.

- 1—Any one is eligible to enter the Game of Movie Titles except employees of The New York Evening GRAPHIC and members of their families.
- 2—Every day for 72 days, beginning May 2nd, The New York Evening GRAPHIC will publish a drawing. A coupon will be attached to these drawings. The Game of Movie Titles will consist of the suggestion of titles for these drawings, the titles to be the names of motion picture plays.
- 3—Cut out both the drawing and coupon. Write on the coupon the title of the play which you think the drawing best represents; your name and address. Save the coupons and drawings until the full 72 have been printed. Then arrange them in numerical order and send them to Movie Title Editor of The New York Evening GRAPHIC.
- 4—Each person is allowed to suggest the names of five motion picture plays for each title drawing, but not more than one suggested title shall be placed on any one coupon. TO ALL CONTESTANTS

START THIS GAME TODAY.

Be one of the thousands who have already entered the lists to corral one of the great prizes to be awarded to those with the keenest vision.

Some idea of the interest around among GRAPHIC readers all over the country may be gleaned from the avalanche of mail which pours into special headquarters daily.

Most of the queries are of a somewhat similar nature. The vast majority of solvers who write in want to know if it is absolutely necessary to submit five answers to each picture. The answer to this query is no with a capital N.

The privilege of permitting contestants to send along five answers was conceived by the judges' sense of fairness. In the catalog of 6,000 titles are many that might be thought to fit a certain picture. In order that everybody in doubt may have more than a single chance the judges decided to inaugurate the five answer scheme.

Of course, it isn't essential to submit more than one title for each drawing, but, like every other game, it always is well to play on the safe side of things.

The only time the number of coupons will enter into the final result will be in the case of a tie. For instance, if two contestants had 67 titles right and one used 346 coupons and the other only 162, the latter would be declared the winner.

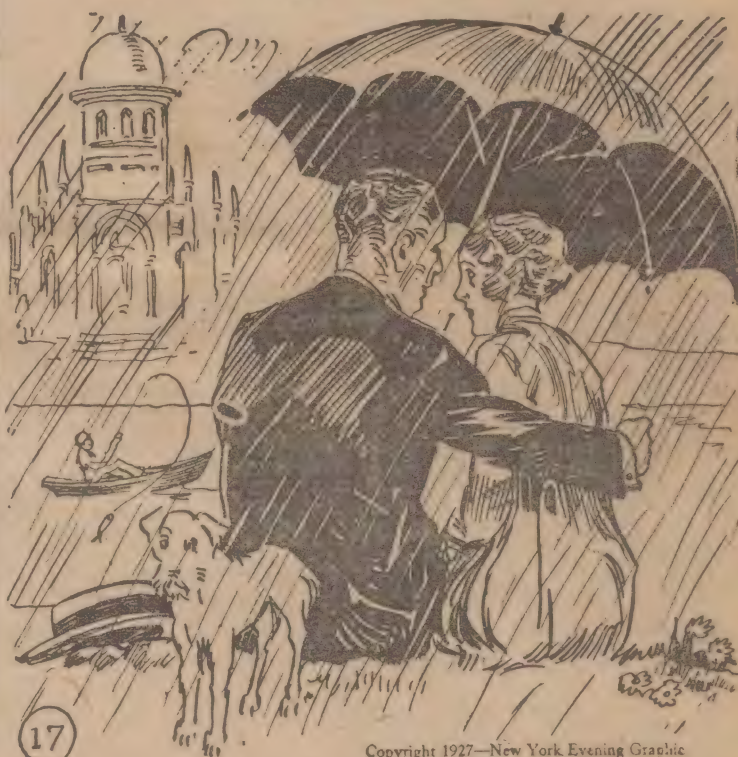

It is well for contestants to remember, however, that records of past contests of this nature show that successful participants submitted on an average of three answers for each picture.

All mail addressed to him will be answered in The GRAPHIC, or by letter if addressed, stamped envelope is inclosed.

New Precautions to Make The Wardrobe Moth-Proof!

"Dear Mme. Hall-Deane:—

"Will you give me some advice about storing blankets, woolen underclothing, motor robes and other garments that must be protected against moths in the summer? I am just a young housekeeper and this is the first time I have had such a problem to solve. I have quite a number of articles to put away and as my apartment is not new, I fear moths may cause a lot of damage.—MRS. G. F."

From time to time there have appeared in this column suggestions for exterminating moths, as well as storing woolens for the summer months, yet so many inquiries have come in recently on this momentous question that a few additional suggestions would not be amiss. Now that the season is really here when the task of storing away winter clothes, furs and blankets cannot be put off any longer, we housekeepers almost envy the family dog or cat, the coats of which give them no more trouble in summer than in winter and for which the mothball and cedar chest mean not one thing. Yet the work must be done. We must put our shoulders to the wheel and get busy.

First of all, closets should be scrubbed with hot water and good soap and dried. Closets or old trunks can be painted with a paint made thin with turpentine. Moths are affected by the odor of turpentine. Odors emanating from moth balls, camphor or cedar shavings are also irritating and help to keep the moths away, but have no killing effect. Cedar chests or cedar-lined rooms are of no avail if the moth eggs have been deposited on clothes stored in them. It is, therefore, very important that all clothes or blankets be thoroughly cleaned, sunned and aired before storing. Every garment should be hung out in the sun and wind, for sunlight and air are deadly foes of moths.

After brushing and airing thoroughly, woolen garments or blankets should be cleaned of all spots of grease or oil with benzine. Saturate a cloth with benzine and rub spot until it disappears. If a ring of benzine remains, wet spot again with benzine, sprinkle with table salt and rub until ring is gone. Hang in the air until the odor evaporates. The new method of spraying with moth prevention preparations is very valuable.

Blankets, woolen underclothing or other flat garments can be neatly folded, without danger of making unsightly creases, and packed in boxes or trunks if cedar chests are not available. Outer garments should be hung on hangers in the tar paper bags that come for that purpose. These bags come in all sizes and shapes. Sheets of tar paper, large enough to fold around packages containing clothing or blankets can also be bought. The folds of all packages should be protected by strips of paper pasted over the joinings. Newspaper can also be used as wrappings. Use two or three layers to make sure that all cracks are covered, thus making the inside of the package moth proof.

If you are at all uncertain about the safety of any stored garment, take it out of storage in the middle of summer, air and sun it and return it to storage again.

It is a good idea to label all packages, for it saves time to get the article out of storage which is needed first.

SUSPENDERS AGAIN!

The trouser skirt, which was introduced recently by noted French couturiers, is confirmed in later and more detailed reports as an interesting and versatile fashion theme.

Naturally and logically adapted to sports costumes, it is also used in a Turkish or Oriental version in delightful afternoon and evening dresses. It must be emphasized that these culotte skirts are arranged with pleats and panels, with the trouser effect not too clearly in evidence.

And suspenders have staged a come-back—according to Paris! A charming afternoon frock in dark blue with a suspender-like arrangement of straps over a pink bodice has a clever wrap-around trouser skirt, which is concealed by the skirt being double across the front and opening on the side.

SHOPS INDIVIDUAL

By MME. HALL-DEANE

For Miss 14-to-20, Paris is sending adorable frocks of sheer organdie in delicate pastel shades with applique flowers in colorful chiffon. The very last word in youth and summer time smartness!

"Some time ago I wrote you for the name of an orthopedic shoemaker," writes Ruth S—. "I have been to see the expert whose name you gave me and have purchased a pair of shoes and arches from him—and I am now writing to thank you. He knows his business thoroughly and has given me many helpful hints regarding the feet and limbs—and since I have worn his arches I can walk for miles—and still want to walk, whereas before I would walk a few blocks and have to stop to rest. I hope you will pass the good word along to others who read your column."

Certainly the good word will be passed along. The address of this splendid shoemaker may be had for the asking.

Among the materials decreed by Fashion for late spring and summer wear, printed chiffon has few rivals when it comes to smartness. For luncheon or tea-time, the long sleeved chiffon gown is ultra-smart; for dinner or dance, the sleeveless gown with softly fluttering draperies.

If you do not feel up to par in the mornings—if that tired, sleepy feeling insists upon hanging over in spite of the fact that you've spent eight hours or so in bed—then maybe your mattress is not all that it should be. There's such a thing as carrying economy too far. It's false economy to sleep on a cheap, hard mattress. If you didn't sleep well last night—or the night before—phone the Service Bureau and you will be given the name of a reliable store where a sale of bedding is being staged. Here is a chance to get very fine mattresses at prices startlingly low. Interesting bargains in rust-proof springs, too.

New sports frocks are so designed that they are equally appropriate for summer afternoon affairs as well as outdoor events. A stunning frock on this order has a box pleated skirt of white georgette edged with contrasting georgette. The upper part is in the contrasting material with floral appliques.

Corinne: A tea wagon will make a most acceptable wedding gift for your sister. For less than $15 you can get a beautiful wagon—if you make your purchase at a shop which the Bureau has in mind. A small deposit will hold your selection. Your sister also will do well to shop here for furniture for her new home. Excellent values in suites as well as occasional pieces. The shop is open until 9 in the evening—so you easily can shop after business hours.

Attractive Sports Frock

By RUTH BATES

A most desirable version for every-day occasion wear. The smart arrangement of plaits at center-front, V-shaped neckline finished with applied band terminating in a bow tie, and perfectly straight back, recommends it strongly for the woman with a stout figure or for the woman who is inclined to be stout. Shantung, printed linen, printed silk crepe, crepe Elizabeth, wool jersey and tussikasha are serviceable fabrics to select for Design No. 793. Pattern in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. The 36-inch size requires 3½ yards of 40-inch material with ¾ yard of 40-inch contrasting.

Just inclose 10 cents extra when you order your pattern and a copy of our large Pattern Catalogue will be sent to you.

To obtain today's pattern, write to Ruth Bates, and inclose 15 cents in coin or stamps. Give the correct size and be sure to write your name and address plainly. Address Ruth Bates, GRAPHIC Patterns, care of The New York Evening GRAPHIC, 25 City Hall Place, New York city.

DADDY DUSK

The Sandman

"Daddy Dusk—whoopieee!"

"Please don't bother me—I'm asleep," said the Sandman, as he opened his eyes slowly.

"I want you to take Billy Heide-wald of New Haven, Conn., on a Dream Journey. He would like to go to the Land of Rubber Bands," said Doodle, the hired man.

In less time than it takes a cow bell to tickle, Daddy Dusk was in New Haven looking for Billy. Finally he found his house and crept in the door.

"Hello!" whispered the Sandman. "Hello!" answered Billy. "Do you think I'm a telephone?"

"Quit your kidding," replied the old man. "Come, get into my car and we'll go to the Land of Rubber Bands."

"Will there be any music?" asked Billy.

"No," the Sandman answered, "there will be no music from the rubber bands."

"I'm sorry—I love music," said Billy, as he put on his hat.

They were soon on the shore of the river which flows through the Land of Rubber Bands.

By and by a little man came down the road in an automobile.

"I have come to present this car to you," he said to Billy. "Here are some rubber bands, and when you get them home, plant them in the back yard and they will soon be tires for this car."

Billy did as he was told, but the car wouldn't run, and the next time Daddy Dusk called Billy told him about it and he said the automobile was tired. "I'll get you another," said the old man.

And he did!

The GIRL Who Couldn't Pretend

The bottom fell out of the world when Juliette Mainwaring James discovered that she had never learned to pretend. If only she could have pretended, she might have had the movie job that she and the other national beauty contest winners were trying out for.

And to make the discovery just when father's business was rocky, and they needed money! She wouldn't let them know. She'd stay in New York to get a job. Maybe Terry Vance, the nice newspaper man she'd met on the train, could help her.

But jobs were scarce, and Terry was upstate on assignment.

Terry takes Gloria Burton, a sob sister, into his confidence, to help him hunt the lost Jimmie.

"Now, I've told you the whole story, what do you make of it?" he finished.

"She had heard of her father's hard luck, probably from some well-meaning meddler back home. Decided to stay here and do something heroic to redeem the family fortunes. That's my theory, unless—she gave him a straight look now from amazingly blue eyes—"you didn't make love to her, Terry?"

"Absolutely not, Gloria."

"Does he realize that he's dead in love with the girl?" Gloria asked herself, the maternal look deepening. Aloud she said, "Well, then, let's go on my theory. She came back to get a job. She's looking for one. Now describe her again, as accurately as you can. I can't tell much from this horrible newspaper picture."

"Bobbed hair, naturally curly and exactly the color of old copper with candle light on it. Brown eyes, with little gold flecks in them. A creamy skin with color that comes and goes all the time as she talks, and—"

Gloria bent forward and laid a warm little hand on one of Vance's. "Steady, old dear. Just turn naturally and cast your shining orbs at that table for four over by the wall. If I'm not mistaken, that's where she is."

Terry turned, as naturally as was possible for a man with a suddenly pounding heart. Across the room, sat the object of his search. There was another girl with her, and two men.

"Steady! Sit still," warned Gloria.

Jimmie awoke Tuesday morning with a sense of gay adventure.

Job Hunting

The hotel clerk told her of a vacant room in a nice, safe house, only a few doors up the street. It proved to be a small room, but clean and airy. Jimmie paid $10 for a week in advance, and went to the station for her two bags, stopping at a white-fronted restaurant to eat a breakfast of wheat cakes. She brought the bags in a taxi, choosing it carefully this time, and by noon was unpacked and ready to select her job from the help wanted ads in the morning paper.

Her eyes ran down the long columns. What a lot of folks wanted help!

She went to three places before she really believed that all the jobs are snapped up in the early morning. "You gotta get up with the milkmen, sister," the last grinning office boy told her. "Buy an evenin' edition and pick your job now. Then crawl out of the hay in the mornin' and try to be foist in line."

"Thank you so much," laughed Jimmie.

Eight o'clock found her well toward the front of a line at a 29th Street address. At 8.30 they were all admitted to a big bare room. A little smooth-faced, smooth-haired, smooth-voiced man came in, talking earnestly to a tall, yellow-haired woman in a striking black-and-white frock.

"That's so! We had to have a flapper model. Miss Rita, you pick one. No, wait a minute, yet."

His eyes had lighted on Jimmie. He walked over to her. "You're new at this, yes? Never modeled before?"

"I've worn clothes before," said Jimmie, displaying a dimple which didn't hurt her cause. "And I've had just a little experience in motion pictures."

"So? Walk over to the window. Now back. That's a good walk. Like a college girl you got it. I think we take her, Miss Rita. Twenty a week till you get some experience."

"I think I can get thirty," said Jimmie, surprising herself with her boldness.

"So? Well, twenty-five then, and go to work right now. Miss Rita will show you where to dress."

It seemed to be settled. The other girls were filing out. Miss Rita, whose face gave the impression of being permanently enameled, took Jimmie into another room.

"You can have this dressing-room," Miss Rita said, swinging open a door. There was nothing in the little room but a pole from which swung empty hangers, and a full-length mirror. "Now come out in the stock rooms and I'll show you some of our stuff."

Jimmie followed to another room and caught her breath. Rows and rows of racks, from which hung a rainbow array of dresses. She walked up and down, bewildered and entranced. Miss Rita smiled at her enthusiasm.

"Party dresses and little afternoon and church frocks for girls going to college this fall," Miss Rita said.

She went away, but came back, eyeing Jimmie speculatively. "Another thing, don't be too squeamish. If anybody starts getting fresh let them down easy. No use being sensitive if you got to earn a living. String 'em along and you'll seldom have to buy your own dinner. You'll soon learn that from the others, too."

"You don't mean I have to go to dinner with men?" asked Jimmie, so dismayed that Miss Rita laughed again. "You don't have to do anything. But if you

There were a dozen other models. Experienced, all of them, with heavily marcelled heads, thin lines of eyebrows, beaded lashes, carmine lips. They watched her with admiring or spiteful eyes, according to their dispositions. The buyers were nearly all men, a good many of them from the smaller towns, no coarser nor more careless than the average group of men, knowing a nice young girl when they saw her. A few times Jimmie flushed uncertainly at some remark; a number of jokes went over her head without registering. On the whole, the day had no striking incidents. Jimmie went out to lunch alone. The other girls went in groups, but none of them invited her to join them. Late in the afternoon a man who was buy-she came out of her dressing room, she found the tall blonde waiting for her. "Wouldn't you like to come down to a little place in the Village where I eat dinner?" she asked. "That is, if you have nothing special to do. I think I could give you some points about the work, if you'd like it."

"Oh, thank you," accepted Jimmie delightedly. She was so glad it was this nice one who had chosen to be friends with her. This girl, in her street clothes, was almost as conservative as Jimmie herself. Perhaps she came from a small town recently. They walked down 5th Avenue to 8th Street, chattering of this and that and turned in at a well-filled restaurant whose air was hazy with smoke. The girl selected a table set for four, beside the wall.

New Friends

"My friends call me Peggy," said the girl. "I hope you are one of them."

"I hope so, too," laughed Jimmie. "My friends call me Jimmie, and you've been so nice to me. Now please tell me about everything. How did I make out today?"

"You have to look out for yourself, of course. But you'll get along. You must get used to men, though, and not think every one is going to eat you up because they say a kind word or two. Why, here come a couple of our friends now. I see where we save our dinner money. Mr. Van Dyne, Mr. Grahame, meet Miss Mainwaring. You met her before today, but not formally. Move over there opposite me, Jimmie, and let the men sit between us. This is a nice surprise."

The men were bowing, laughing, drawing out the chair for Jimmie, seating themselves. Mr. Van Dyne, who sat at Jimmie's right, was the one who had asked her to dine with him. And all at once Jimmie knew that it wasn't a surprise at all; that he had planned this, with the blonde girl.

The men produced little flasks. Peggy emptied her water glass and accepted some of the stuff as a matter of course. Jimmie declined, firmly, in spite of their teasing. "It's all right, she's too young to drink," declared Van Dyne, patting her hand as it lay on the table. "I like 'em innocent, myself!"

In the laugh that followed Jimmie, avoiding those eager eyes of his, looked straight into the mirror on the wall before her. From the other side of the room was reflected a small table, and there, with a strikingly attractive young woman, sat Terry Vance. The young woman was smoking. And now she was holding Terry's hand, openly. And he liked it. That was it! No wonder he didn't come to see her off, nor anything. He never was interested in her, at all. He flirted like that with every one! Well, that was that! An air castle crashed dismally in little Jimmie's heart.

And now where was the elusive Jimmie? See tomorrow's GRAPHIC.

Now Comes Freckle Time! Prepare the Milk Bath!

By LADY BEATRICE GREY

(Advice in this column is confined strictly to natural methods.)

This is the season when lovers of the great out-of-doors make their sacrifices upon the altar of beauty; or, rather, that little niche in the altar where petitions are wont to be made for a clear and sparkling skin. In other words, it is the time when one begins to reap a harvest of freckles.

Nature, however, offers many valuable aids for their removal. The juice of lemons is a splendid bleach. Applications of sour cream during the day are said to be excellent. At the same time much good can be accomplished by eating simple food and drinking plenty of pure fresh water.

Bathing the face in buttermilk, a homely remedy reminiscent of grandmother's day, might be practiced with profit today. Many English beauties, noted for their clear, lovely complexions, use nothing more in the way of cosmetics than pure, sweet cream applied nightly. This has a wonderfully softening and bleaching effect.

Indeed, according to many authorities, there is much virtue in the milk bath for the face—and it is one of the beauty aids handed down from the court beauties of France.

In fact, Mme. Recamier, one of the loveliest women France ever produced, was said to credit her exquisite complexion to the fact that she bathed her face, hands, neck and arms in milk daily, and also to the additional fact that she walked for at least two hours in the fresh air and ate three oranges daily.

Mrs. F.: The teeth should not suffer more during pregnancy than at any other time with the right kind of diet. At the same time you should take every possible precaution to protect them during that period. One of the first things you should do is to visit your dentist and see that your teeth are put in the best condition possible. Of course, the teeth should be brushed even more carefully now than at any other time. If any sign of pyorrhea or inflammation of the gum margins is present, the necks of the teeth should be carefully scaled and all tartar and other foreign matter removed.

Carol: To acquire poise, the first rule is to learn to avoid fidgeting, a habit which is just as trying on your own nerves as it is on those of the beholder. It is a good plan to practice sitting and standing before a mirror until you have learned the postures that are most graceful. The mirror should be large enough to show the whole figure. After you have learned the correct posture, try to hold it for a long while.

radio activity in 1896 and radium by the Curies in 1898.

All of this message was cleverly designed for public consumption. The men composing this cancer association know well enough that cancer is still hopeless and ABSOLUTELY NO cases are saved. They know that radical surgery only shortens the patient's life; that it often converts a benign tumor into a malignant one; that the X-ray has killed many, but prolonged or saved the life of no cancer sufferer, but has produced cancer and that radium is a hopeless failure and more destructive than the X-ray.

Every member of that association knows, and Dr. Stewart knows, that the solution of the cancer problem has not been found, and that it cannot be found in these agencies. They know that these agencies are worse than the disease, even producing the disease in healthy individuals. The Curies are not medical practitioners. Neither Curie nor Mme. Curie ever graduated in medicine. Are they quacks? What right have they to dabble in medicine?

Living to Live

Herbert M. Shelton, D.P., D.N.T.

As another evidence of the misleading propaganda with which medical organizations and institutions are flooding the country, the World of April 10 carried an account of what it calls the message of Dr. George David Stewart, president of the American College of Surgeons, to the New York Cancer Association, which began its drive that week for $5,000,000 with which to build a national cancer center—that is, a place for vivisection, animal and human. Dr. Stewart said:—

"Thirty years ago cancer was hopeless, and practically no cases were saved. Then there came in rapid succession adoption of radical surgery in 1894, X-ray in 1895,

VIGOROUS HEALTH

YOUR QUESTIONS ANSWERED

By PAUL J. VEATCH

Does a fast for seven days mean to take nothing but water? Would not this be hard for a rundown nervous person? What is a good liniment for broken bones that feel at times like a fresh cut from a butcher knife? MRS. F. A. A.

A fast means to take nothing but water, but this is not necessary in all cases. When nervous it is generally well to take either fruit juices or vegetable broth instead of the absolute fast. The length of this diet will depend on the weight, strength and general condition, but at least three days should be taken. More can be taken later, if necessary. The diet afterward also depends on the exact condition, but milk, properly employed, is usually applicable. If solid foods are used a largely fruit, vegetable and buttermilk diet is used with moderate amounts of cereals and nuts. No liniment will do the bones any good. Proper diet and sunlight will be most effective.

In a case of intestinal tuberculosis, what vegetables do you advise? How do you prepare vegetable juices? ANNA K.

I seldom advise vegetables in such a case. The usual plan of treatment would be several days on fruit juices and water, followed by the Salisbury meat diet for a week or ten days, then the milk diet. A day or two on fruit juices is observed every three weeks. If the fruit causes irritation, vegetable juices may be employed. The raw juices extracted by grinding, grating and then pressing are usually to be preferred, but some cases may need to employ vegetable broth prepared by cooking a number of vegetables together and then straining through a sieve. Properly graduated sun baths or ultra-violet radiations are of the greatest importance in addition to the diet.

What is a good diet for high blood pressure? My weight is 109 and age 72. MRS. ELIZ. C.

The usual treatment by natural methods would be an orange diet for three days, repeated every three weeks, with a limited diet of natural foods between. This includes mostly fruits and vegetables, with moderate amounts of whole grain cereals, dairy products and nuts.

No meat, tea, coffee, smoked or pickled foods, refined or fried foods are allowed. Walking, deep breathing, sun baths, cool baths and plenty of sleep are all employed. The sun baths must be started gradually, usually five minutes for the first day, adding two minutes per day up to two hours. The head is protected.

Please let me know what I can do to stop snoring at night. M. M. T.

Snoring may be due merely to sleeping on the back, in which case the remedy is obvious. However, in most cases there is some catarrh which induces mouth breathing. The habit of mouth breathing can be overcome by tying the jaw shut, but this should not be done until able to breathe freely through the nose. The removal of the catarrh depends on cleansing the system by means of an orange diet for up to seven days and on building up the vitality by means of a largely raw food diet, together with deep breathing of fresh air, exercise, sun baths, cold baths, and plenty of sleep. There should always be plenty of fresh air in the bedroom.

Is nervousness hereditary? If so, is there a complete cure? JOHN M.

A tendency of nervous diseases may be inherited, the diseases themselves are not. This tendency would not develop if right habits of living are observed. If it has developed, a complete cure is possible by giving careful attention to mental and physical treatment. The exact measures depend on just what is wrong.

THE PRIMITIVE LOVER

An Original Macfadden
TRUE STORY

NO MAN is a god to his own valet, and no husband a hero to his own wife. Yet mine is. Even across the breakfast table in smug, respectable surroundings, engrossed in his morning paper and bound for a well regulated brokerage office, he is still a hero to me.

Of course, everything about him belies that. Even his name—Eugene.

Gene's was an old, well-established family and mother saw in him the open door to the genuine elite.

I liked Gene, but at times felt a little bit like laughing at him.

Once he kissed me, a grave, almost fatherly kiss on the cheek, and I nearly screamed with rage. Had he no blood in his veins? Was he made of asbestos?

Just about this time dad became interested in a gold mining proposition in Alaska, and planned a trip across the country into the Far North to inspect it. He asked us to join him.

Mother, who knew that I was making little progress toward the altar, saw in this apparent business journey a chance to bring Gene's courtship to a climax. She prevailed upon him to come along, assuring him that a stay in that rugged, pioneer's country would do him a great deal of good.

Naturally I resented this.

Killisnoo, Alaska! A collection of shacks and frame dwellings at the foot of the towering range of snow-topped mountains!

Father's mine was some sixty miles from the port.

There were about two hundred Indians in Hoonah, a score of white miners, a general store and a post office, and the mine.

Half Savage

It was a lugubrious outlook. We were met by a tall man, who led us along a soggy path to a three-room cabin, while two natives carried our luggage. It was quite dark within and our guide struck a match, cupped his hands over it, and lit the oil lamp.

"I don't like to wake the cook," he said, "because he's the first one up in the camp. But there's some ham and eggs and coffee here and I'll make you a little supper. I guess you're all pretty hungry."

As he swung out of the room, he looked at me. He was swarthy-skinned, had sleek black hair, dark, bead-like eyes, rather high cheek bones and seemed to radiate an animal virility. His glance was a bit disdainful, too.

"That's the mine foreman," father explained in a low voice. "A half-breed—with a college education. Good engineer, too, they say. Knows his business and this country! His father was a school teacher who fell in love with an Indian girl. The hotel clerk told me about it."

"After his marriage, the white man—well, he was sort of exiled. Took to drink and died. The boy had something in him, just the same. He worked his way through school, studied engineering in the States and then came back here. They're lucky to have him on the job, the clerk said."

"It's ready now."

The half-breed's voice broke in on our reflections. We needed no second urging, however, and soon were devouring the food he had prepared.

"What's your name?" I asked.

"John—John, the Indian, they call me," he answered curtly and a trifle defiantly. Then he turned to my father, who had finished his supper, and was now watching the smoke of his cigar. "I'll take you up tomorrow morning, and show you the surface outcroppings on the mountains."

"May I come along?"

"Sure, if you'd like to. Better dress warm, because it's always pretty cool up there. I'll have your lunches packed and be around pretty early, because it's a long climb. By the way, is he going too? I want to know how many pairs of shoe-packs to have ready."

He jerked his thumb in the direction of Gene, and his look was full of mockery. Although I'm certain Gene had had no intention of going, he flared up and answered, "Yes, I'll go along."

John roused us early next morning.

Through the mountain forest on a slow incline we trudged. It was a narrow footpath and we were obliged to walk in single file most of the time.

John's gait was the relentless, lithe swing of an animal. We tired after a short while, but kept doggedly behind him. It was Gene who finally asked him to slow up, presumably on my account.

John smiled a half-disdainful smile. "You'll get your second wind soon, and then it won't bother you."

We followed in silence, father more amused than fatigued at the turn of things. Presently John slowed up and, pointing to the ground, said:—

"Here are some bear tracks. Yes, you see, the old boy cleaned up the skunk cabbage around this spot. Mr. Bear likes that very much. Well, I hope you can all climb a tree. Choose a small one, too—that's the safest."

I was more thrilled than frightened at the possibility of having a real bear jump out of the underbrush. But Gene was indignant.

"You should have known better than to ask the lady along on a dangerous trip like this," he remonstrated.

"I think she enjoys it," John smiled back. And I did, too!

After lunch and a brief respite, we continued upward.

We reached a narrow mountain creek. John walked through it and I could see the water was ankle deep. I had no desire to wade, and I hesitated on the other bank, as did Gene and dad. Without a word the Indian returned, gathered me in his arms as though I were a baby, and lifted me across.

He offered to do the same for Gene who, refusing indignantly, leaped across, only to land in a snow bank, from which the half-breed rescued him.

We reached the outcroppings, saw the gold-shot ore, and made the painful, endless journey home. Gene was ill with cold, and so mother made him something hot and put him to bed.

The next few weeks were fascinating. In all my woodland expeditions John, of course, was my guide and tutor. Gene occasionally went along, but he seemed to prefer work around the mine to these excursions. His health had greatly improved and the plain food, air and labor had filled him out.

One night, after supper, he asked me to walk with him along the beach.

"Evelyn," he began, "I'm going to ask you not to go out with that half-breed any more."

"By what right do you make this request?"

"By the right of one who loves you and wants to marry you." He curiosity got the better of discretion.

"What is that?" I asked pointing to it.

"Oh, I got that in a fight with a bear—you wouldn't believe it, but that scar's nearly a foot long. I was practically torn in half last year."

"The bear, a black one, surprised me, knocked the gun out of my hand and I had to wrestle with him before I could get my knife. There aren't many around here who can survive a hand-to-hand struggle with a bear."

He rose as he talked. There was something in his eyes which seemed to draw me closer to that scar.

His bead-like eyes, ablaze, were riveted upon me.

took my hand gently, and kissed it. That gesture exasperated me.

"I'll go out with whom I please! John may be a half-breed, but at least he's a real man."

Had I cut him with a whip, I couldn't have hurt him more. Not a word passed on the way home.

Two days later I started on a mountain trip with John.

I had also grown to like John.

At a level patch, bedded with thick grass, we stopped for lunch. At the side we had ascended the slope was gradual, but several yards away it dropped off abruptly into a sheer descent of hundreds of feet to boulders below.

Hot and tired, I flung myself on the ground, while John built a fire to make the coffee. His shirt was open at the throat and I observed a livid scar across his chest. I wondered what it was, as we ate. Then

I had a mad desire to see it—place my finger on it. His bead-like eyes, ablaze, were riveted on me.

"Here—look—see." He tore his shirt open, his hands outstretched. A power greater than myself impelled me toward him.

I was locked in an embrace of steel, my cheek against his massive chest, his hungry mouth on mine. Then I tore myself away, panic-stricken.

There was a wild, maniacal look in his face as he pursued me.

"No, you don't," he cried. "You can't trifle with me. I may be only half-white—but I'm good enough, I'm strong enough to take you. This is a wild, untamed country. It's in your blood. I've seen the look in your eye. It's in my blood, too. I want you. You're going to be my wife—yes, my squaw."

As I screamed in terror I had a fleeting, panoramic vision of the past two months. Perhaps I was to blame. He was coming closer, a leer of triumph and desire on his face. His hands were on my wrists when a voice boomed, "Let her go!"

The Unexpected

It was Gene. He looked like a flaming sun-god in contrast to the swarthy half-breed. Two months in the open had made him firmer, stronger, more virile.

"Come, Evelyn, we'll go," he said to me.

"No, she won't," cried John. "I claim her as mine. If you want her—you'll have to fight!"

There was something so fiendish and menacing in his face that I became frightened for Gene.

"John," he answered, "you know something of the ways of white men. Go back quietly, and let's forget this. But, if I have to, I'll kill you."

He stood erect, head thrown back, lips firm. Fear passed from me. I felt a tremendous confidence in him.

"Come, Evelyn, don't be afraid—we're going."

At this, the half-breed suddenly flung himself upon Gene. The men were at grips. Straining, tugging, heaving, pulling, they beat and pommelled each other like two primitive beasts.

In my excitement, I had not observed that the men were rolling on the grass plot toward the edge. To fall over it, hundreds of feet below, would be certain death.

In horror I watched. Gene was underneath. The rude strength of the half-breed gave him an advantage. Half-lifting, half-dragging, he was slowly drawing his weaker opponent to the edge.

I do not know what change came over me. Perhaps I, too, returned to an atavistic ancestor. Suddenly I leaped on the half-breed. They were near the sheer drop. I scratched and bit and clawed at him. The sudden sharpness of my unexpected attack forced him to relax, and in that second of breathing space Gene, with a desperate final effort, shot from underneath and struck the surprised half-breed a blow which sent him reeling backward to a horrible fate.

I must have fainted then. Eons later, it seemed, I opened my eyes. Gene's bruised face was above me. "Evelyn, sweet, I owe you a great debt. You saved my life."

"I guess I can say the same," I reminded him feebly. And then curiosity again got the better of me. "But tell me, Gene, how did you know we would be here?"

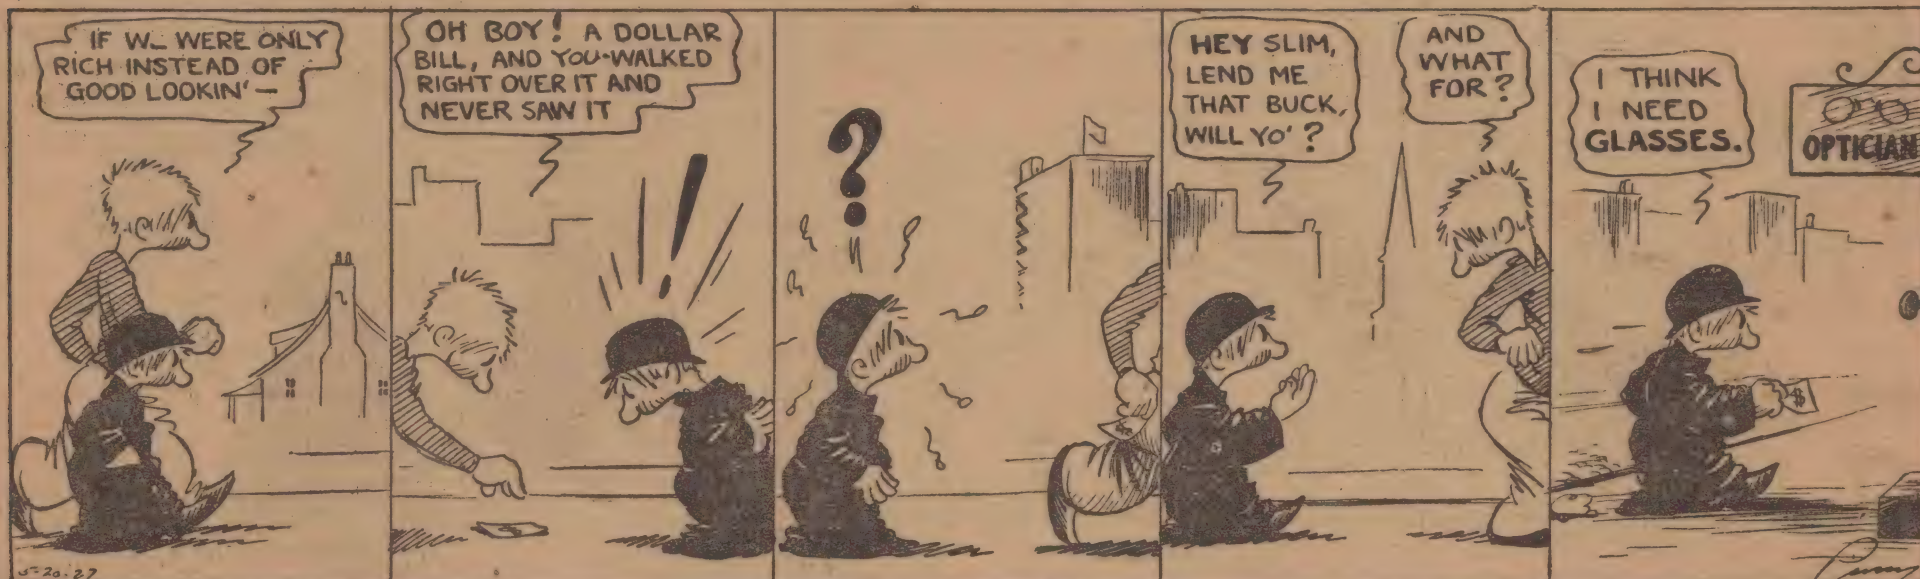

"Well, you remember that night I asked you not to see him. I had overheard John the day before, bragging about what a hit he was making—and what he intended to do. It was too terrible to repeat to you, but I made up my mind to watch over and protect you with my life, if necessary. Evelyn, I love you more than I can say."

"Gene, dear—you need not say. I understand! I am proud—and oh, so happy!"

And there on that high peak, among towering world-old trees and mountains white with age, my lover gathered me to him and kissed me as I had never been kissed before.

A friend called at the house and invited me to accompany her on a picnic planned for the morrow. Not caring to go, I explained that my husband and I had made all arrangements to visit relatives in the country the following day.

Just then he entered the room and said: "Well, kid, as we haven't anything on for tomorrow, I guess I'll go fishing."

Radiographies

Dailey Paskman, director of WGBS, was the first man who brought the theater to radio through his presentation of plays direct from their stages and his adaptation of dramas for performance before the microphone.

Dailey Paskman and audiences in the vicinity of New York have had an opportunity to see the minstrel shows which have been broadcast for the past few years.

The WGBS executive was the first radio impresario to present the old-time minstrel show as an air offering. Another contribution of his to radio was the broadcasting of "The Miracle," direct from the Century Theater. Before entering radio Mr. Paskman was associated with Morris Gest in the production of the plays. He also wrote, in collaboration with Rudolph Friml, "Chansonette," "In Love With Love" and "On a Blue Lagoon."

Louis Dornay, tenor, will be heard in a joint recital with Lilly Meagher, soprano, as the high spot of WOR's program at 7.30 o'clock tonight. His program will include some of the tenor roles he sang with Paul Alt-house, Mlle. Bourskaya and others.

A GRAND FINALE

After a dozen years, experimenting with this classic or that revue or paricaturing this celebrity or that nonentity, the proud but soon to perish Neighborhood Playhouse group last evening presented the last of its productions, another "Grand Street Follies," a satirical revue so amusing at times that even so friendly an enemy as this play attender stifled an imaginative sob or two because of its forthcoming departure. What is to become of Albert Carroll—an adroit mimic, this young and flip-pant actor, whose sassy wit last night supplied most of the boisterous chuckling and applause—and Dorothy Sands and most of the other worthies? This corner mourns with the subscribers and the Sisters Lewisohn and Helen Arthur over the decision to adjourn.

The newest of the "Follies" is, for the most part, an excellent entertainment. The first-act finale is shoddy, and that time-worn poke at the tabloids is again employed in the new revue, but this time it served as a boomerang and retarded what began as a swift show.

That skit which has to do with the Salem Corner publicity hogs might easily be embalmed, and the first finale, too, could be sash-weighted. There are so many high spots, however, that those few anemic moments are hardly worth complaining about.

The tunes by Max Ewing are good, particularly the ditty in the "Don't Ask Me Another" skit. The sketches and lyrics are credited to clever Agnes Morgan, who acts in some of them. The costume designs, by Aline Bernstein, are another feature, and the playing of Mr. Carroll, Miss Sands, Lois Shore, Marc Loebell, Paula Trueman and Junius Matthews is of a high order.

It is in the second half of the revue that the Neighborhooders shine. It is here that the revue unfolds itself at a clip so lightning paced that the spectators were breathless from laughter and hand pounding. It was in that part of the attraction that not a few of the auditors could have wept over the plight of the organization that is soon to disintegrate, and it was also in this act that Carroll, essaying Hamlet, read the last will of the Grand Ghettoers, which bequeathed bitter pokes at those critics who knifed them in the back when they weren't looking.

Woolcott had taken his punishment in the first act, in which Carroll, mimicking Mrs. Fiske, and Mr. Matthews, impersonating the reviewer, got gay and vitriolic. The reading of the will contained saucy and flippant cracks at the Messrs. Dale and Hammond, Dale receiving something distasteful because he, more than his confreres, employed the old gag about the distance to 466 Grand St.; and Mr. Hammond, "who has become so blasé, and couldn't be annoyed visiting the temple," was bequeathed to "the lowest bidder."

It was then, sirs, that this adolescent gloried in his obscurity, although the unobtrusive Osborn of the Eveworld, in a mystery play travesty, had his hair ruffled and was accused of being a spook.

Go and enjoy the last of "The Grand Street Follies." You will find it highly seasoned, daring, amusing, and an exhilarating show.

Around the Square

HARRY WOLCHER, producer, sails on Saturday via the Minnesota for London, where he will produce the "Night Hawk."

Jennie Goldstein is attracting large crowds in Brooklyn this week, where she is appearing in "Her Great Secret" at the Liberty Jewish Theater. Miss Goldstein appeared in this play for twenty weeks in her own theater on the east side.

"The Green Rabbit," a new mystery melodrama, will be produced hereabouts some time in June. Howard Daring, the author, has just finished the script changes requested by the producer, and the play will go into rehearsal within the next two weeks.

ANOTHER of those rare comedy reunions will take place next Sunday night at the Century Theater, when Joe Weber and Lew Fields, the famous old music hall stars, will act as masters of ceremonies at the all-star benefit in aid of the Saranac Lake Day Nursery. Leon Errol and Julius Tannen also will officiate in the role of entrepreneurs.

Monday evening marks the 300th performance of "2 Girls Wanted." And, incidentally, this is another proof that there is still a theater-going audience for clean, humorous, American plays, as evinced by the fact that "2 Girls Wanted" holds the record for the longest run of any comedy produced in New York this season.

LICE BRADY and Lionel Atwill, who are co-starring in "The Thief," at the Ritz, will play the second act over the radio tonight on station WHN. This drama by Henry Bernstein boasts of an unusual second act in that only Miss Brady and Mr. Atwill appear on the stage, holding it alone for fifty minutes. Miss Brady and Mr. Atwill will go on the air at 11.30.

Casting for "Bare Facts of 1927" begins this week at the Triangle Theater in Greenwich Village. Kathleen Kirkwood, director of the intimate review, will break in the play at her own theater, presenting it later in the summer at a Broadway house.

"Pickwick," the Dickens dramatization by Cosmo Hamilton and Frank C. Reilly, which has won enthusiastic receptions this spring in Washington, Philadelphia and Boston, will close in Boston on Saturday, May 21, after a five-week run. It will open in New York in October.

Flickerettes

J. G. Blystone, Fox director, is in Europe to pick up material for next year's production... John C. Flinn is on his way East to preside at the Pathe and Producers' Distributing Corporation conventions to be held at the Pennsylvania Hotel... Jacqueline Logan, who did good work in "King of Kings," will make her next two screen appearances in Columbia Productions... Archduke Leopold of Austria will enter the movies. He is now in Los Angeles and has been signed by Paramount to work under Von Stroheim... Betty Caldwell, remembered for her Western pictures, has been given an important part in Norman Kerry's "The Irresistible Lover" for Universal... Constance Talmadge, with a new wardrobe of Parisian gowns, started on her next picture, "Breakfast," with Malcolm St. Clair directing.

"Rich but Honest" Shows Newcomers of Promise

By BETTY COLFAX

Two more shopgirls find romance in the cinema and at the same time entertain audiences daily at the Hippodrome this week. "Rich but Honest" comes in the wake of 100 pictures that carry poor working girls to romance and riches, but in spite of its unoriginal and stilted title, it is good comedy, not scintillating, but laughter-provoking.

This latest Fox film, which Albert Ray directed, brings two newcomers to the screen. Nancy Nash, an attractive blonde, and Marjorie Beebe, brunette foil with a flair for being very funny, find their first big parts in "Rich but Honest" and give every indication that they should have further opportunities. Miss Nash is really beautiful, and Miss Beebe is an effective comedian, descending to slapstick, taking advantage of lowbrow gags, but putting her work over with assurance and satisfying results.

Former Newspaper Man

Clifford Holland, a recent acquisition of Fox, is the hero who disproves the theory that vices go with big bank accounts and that only poor lovers can be trusted. J. Farrell MacDonald, Yale man, who worked on newspapers and at various other professions before he became part of the Hollywood colony, is Jim O'Grady, Clifford Holland the bad man with a good line.

Minerva, the blonde, and Maybelle, her dark-haired girl friend, worked in a store, but believed that fame awaited them as soon as Belasco or the Shuberts learned of their existence. So they punched their time clock for the last time, said au revoir to the soap counter and started out on a stage career. They do finally get a chance. Nancy is so dumb she thinks she must play a queenly, stately role when the manager tells her she'll be Lady Godiva, but her friend seems to manage better on the lower rungs of the ladder.

Wins Both Ways

While Minerva's first appearance ends in a catastrophe, with the erstwhile Lady Godiva making her exit excitedly clinging to the horse's tail, they still have hopes until Cupid takes a shot at both young ladies of the ensemble. Maybelle, being funny, gets a garage man, while Nancy, being blond, has her choice between the handsome poor man who proves to be a villain and the rich young suitor who conveniently turns out to be model material for a husband. So Nancy takes the money and the worthy chap.

Ted McNamara, the humorous pest of "What Price Glory?" capers through these reels as the garage man suitor and puts over several amusing incidents. "Rich but Honest" is better than most film attractions at the Hippodrome.

It Seems There Was a Young Man Who "Speakeasyed" Around the World

Sloppy Joe's on the main corner of the big stem in Havana. Half a dozen drink slingers with any variety shimmied up, but gin rickeys preferred. . . . The Tropical in Colon, Panama, is just one of those joints, dead on its feet. . . . Los Angeles—too much Rotary Club and Hollywood spirits. Blow quickly. . . . The Pennant in Honolulu, a bungalow model of a Longacre whisperlow, party of ten to each room. Try "Oak," the Waikiki white mule. . . . Cooling water pool in front of the Imperial, Tokyo, replaces Bromo in Japan.

American women elbowing the bird's-eye maple bar. "Siki!" is the slaying concoction. . . . The Hong Kong in Hong Kong, and now we get to paradise. World's most beautiful shrine to Bacchus. Quiet company and soup and fish. . . . Newspaper motif in the Raffles at Singapore, with a half-moon copydesk bar and pool tables to pass out on. . . . It's the Nineteenth Hole in Manila with an Army and Navy Spex to cool one's throat, but stay off the grass in the middle of the room. . . . Terrible service at the Oriental in Bangkok, as the natives take their time. Their Lophuri Lalli is potent, but fight shy of the betelnut munchers. . . . Lightning in the Bacardi cocktails at Taj Mahal in Bombay with stools at the bar to help one weather the rough seas. . . . Bee line for the Nederlanden in Batavia, where one flops in wicker chairs, sips native beer and watches the high brown flank flippers flap to the notes of weird Javanese tunes which leave a D.T. complex. . . . Pass the torrid hours at Fischsteins in Aden, where one dozes in wicker chairs while Arabians at each end of the porch swing palmleaf fans to rout the flies and kibitzers. Beer is good, but put away the British garrison's whisky and soda. . . . Brandy eggnogs—mmm-m—give one an imitation sleigh-ride while reclining in the upholstered furniture of the Mena House at Cairo, looking upon the pyramids. . . . Flock of wine shops in Athens that click. Try oozoo, a distant brother to absinthe, for the K. O. drop. . . . Garden of the Moon, in Jerusalem, which, as you guessed, is a hotsy-totsy American brand joy cave with a three-lung orchestra. Milk and honey and wine is the menu. . . . Ladies of the evening annoy at the Luna in Venice, drink and dance from now till when; no curfew. . . . Pera Palace in Malaga urges its Castilian wines. . . . Amble over to the St. George in Algiers and sleep it off in the lounge sun parlor. . . . Paris, and how! Harry's New York Bar is the only place for the boys homesick for the main stem; plenty of native American drinks of the B. V. days. If you want something torrid one finds champagne and classy Eves at Zelli's, net forgetting Buddy, the dusky trap drummer and erstwhile cottonpicker who longs for fried chicken and hominy of old Caholina. . . . Cecil or Piccadilly in London, dull and British. . . . Schnapps, that potato potation, at the Palace in Gotheburgh. . . . Hoch! Habsburger Hof in Berlin with its beer and pretzels and dachshunds. . . . Dutch gin at the Weimer in Rotterdam. It'll measure you for a canal going ferry-boat. . . . Ol' Noo Yawk again and real stuff right off the boat, ask for Louie or Joe. . . . Verbum sat sapienti.—Mark Barron.

The Morning Mail

Ed. Note: Con is Jack (Variety) Conway, who drew that rave in Mencken's Americaner, who tabbed him the greatest of the slanguage jugglers. Mr. Conway has a complaint, which follows:—

Dear Walter: I see where another one of those cornfed peasants out in Iowa has taken a sock at Your Broadway Not Mine, and pulled the time-honored squawk about New York and its scarlet women, gunmen and the rest of the bookwurst they feed those yokels when the collections run low.

Those beafs burn me up and heat up anybody who has been around the main stem long enough to know that the dirt shows and hot night clubs couldn't exist unless they got a heavy play from the same visiting Rotarians. The stuff they go for would send the average New Yorker bleating. They want both barrels and usually get it. This town is their Paris and if they don't get a shock every hour while they're here, they go back to Hensfoot Corners feeling that they were cheated.

The same mugs back home raise their dukes in Holy Horrow at the same stuff they go looking for here. That goes for shows, clubs, joints and amours. If some of those fraus out in the sticks could get a load of their consorts, when they hit the capital of the world on business bent, they would throw out the antimacassars, subscribe for the American Mercury, use a pair of double-O clippers on the neck and wear their skirts cut off just below the chin.

They're afraid to tip off their real yens and save up all their inhibitions for their annual emotional jag in this burg. If you think they don't, ask any night club hostess or chorus girl, or get an earful from any dance hall employee, and if they don't tell you that the real hellraisers are the guys who pass the plate back in Oh Aihtch Ten, or one of those other states in the bellyache belt, I'll shine your shoes in Macy's window any afternoon you name.

This is the cleanest and best governed city in the world and you can take that from an ex-apple chaser who has made an intensive study of those towns in "one." I've played ball in slabs that you could hide in the Yankee Stadium, and I've seen more things come off right under the noses of the peasants than would happen in this town among an equal number of people in twenty years. Those same indignant citizens who yes the preachers when they get up and take a fall out of this den of iniquity could give the average New York bred youngster seven in the rack and bank the last ball, when it comes to being real naughty. Any traveling man who likes to play will bear me out in this if you assure him he won't be quoted, and I'll play old Broadway against any Main Street in America for money, marbles or Mack trucks when comparisons are being made.

Have you ever sat on the front porch of one of those Eagle Hotels on a Saturday night in one of those slabs? Certainly you have. You would need Babe Ruth's bat to keep them away. Remember the parade up one side of the street and down the other, past the hotel. Any guy on the stoop with a clean collar and a shine was 8 to 5 and even.

Do you see that on Broadway? You do not. Go over to the Astor Hotel some Saturday night and watch some of those poultry raisers standing in the lobby or out in front waiting to be rushed. After a while a look of bewilderment begins to appear in their sun-kissed lamps. Do they get hep then? Not in those tight-fitting trousers. They either figure that the street is losing its kick or arrive at a conclusion which sends them scuttling into a juice joint looking for action.

Sure we have gamblers, yeggs, guns, cannons, peter men, gun mobs, faltering frails and all the rest of it, but those yokels never see them. If they're on Broadway they're out for the air, and they're so surrounded by hard-working boys and girls on their way to a show or a picture that it would take a Central Office man to put the finger on them.

So it's about time the mob begun fighting back. Those birds have been getting away with that stuff for so long that it will take a couple of lifetimes to overcome it. But I never heard of one of those leading lights from Ipsilanti or Mugvitch going back to their towns to live after they got a break here. Did you? Your pal, CON.

By JAMES W. JENNINGS

There was some excitement yesterday because a boxing match scheduled between Jack Sharkey and Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweights, had to be postponed until this evening, when the event will take place at the Yankee Stadium unless we have more rain.

Mr. Rickard, promoter of the affair, did not shed any tears, especially after he listened in on the news that his stock in the Garden Corporation had advanced and he was $150,000 to the good on the day.

No matter how the few persons interested in the bout may have been disappointed, think of the gladness which filled the hearts of every owner of a garden, lawn or flower patch when rain pattered on the grass.

The United States Department of Agriculture reports that $8,000,000 was saved in labor through the rain. The bout can't draw more than $400,000, so the country at large profits, though it holds no Garden stock.

I was due to wave a hose over a small lawn, some rising young trees and some tragic rose bushes. The downpour saved me at least one hour and a half of spraying the lawn-grass widows and passers-by. Tex has been giving Jupy Pluve, the weather controller, the long he-he for twenty years, but there's a limit to he-hes, and Jupy rained all over Tex's fight booked for last night.

Jupy Hands a Knockout

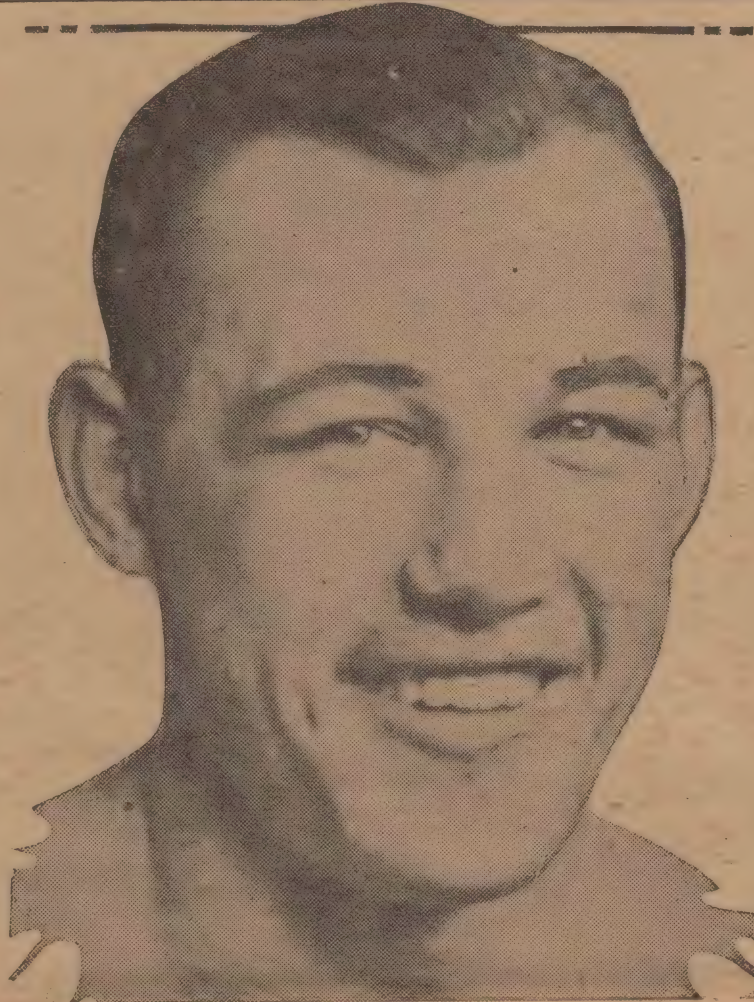

Of all the outdoor matches Tex has promoted this is the first one ever really drowned out.

The Dempsey-Tunney thing at Philadelphia ruined Jupy's good nature about the fifth round, but he didn't spoil the match. A shower of skunks could not have made that bout seem any worse.

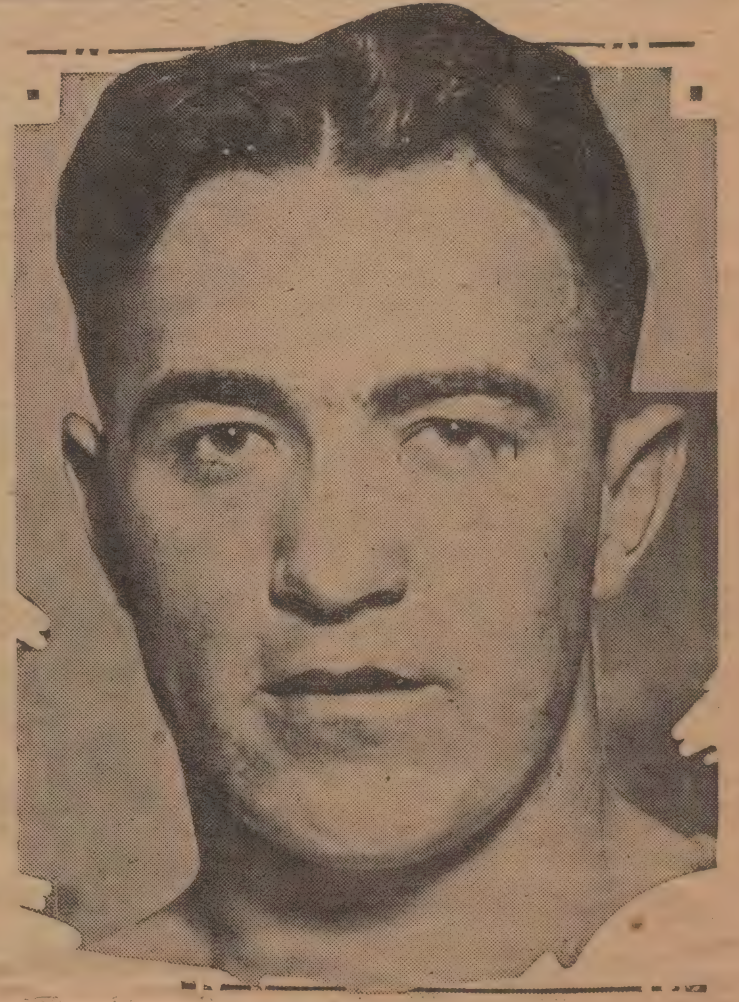

At this writing it appears as though Pluve is going to sprinkle some more and force Tex to run on Saturday.

Two clubs, the Ridgewood Grove and the Long Beach arenas, have that night sewed up, so Rickard would have to dicker with them and

JACK SHARKEY

JIM MALONEY

Here's What Fight Fans Around Town Think of Shindy

Billy Gibson—Sharkey can play golf, he'll finish one up on Jimmy.

Rogers Hornsby—I pick Maloney.

Roger Bresnahan—Maloney.

Bill Terry—Maloney—and how!

Dr. Eddie Farrell—I'm for Sharkey.

He's from my home town.

Al Tyson—Maloney.

Travis Jackson—Maloney.

Eddie Rousch—Maloney for me.

Melvin Ott—The Giants will win.

Burleigh Grimes—Maloney.

Heinie Mueller—Maloney.

Hugh McQuillan—Maloney, and I'll be there.

Fred Fitzsimmons—Willie Meehan could have licked either of them.

Jack Bentley—If Sharkey is as good as he is confident, he'll win.

Virgil Barnes—Maloney.

Jack Cummings—Since Harry Greb died I've been disappointed in the other heavies, and I don't know who to pick.

Billy Craig, Giants' Mascot—Maloney will win sure.

Cracker Hamby—Sharkey for me.

Freddie Lindstrom—Maloney's my man.

John McGraw—Me for Maloney.

He's a good big man.

Jim Tierney—Maloney.

Kent Greenfield—Sharkey.

Al Devorner—Sharkey.

Tom Shaw—It's a close battle.

May the best man win.

Laverne Fator—Booting the winner home tonight is a tough assignment. I'm neutral.

Ed. (Woof) Mills—Maloney will grab the duke in fifteen rounds.

Frankie Marlow—Give the duke to Jimmy Maloney. I think he will hand Sharkey a most comprehensive beating.

Jimmy Flynn—I'm crooning for Maloney tonight. His fight with Jack Delaney was a classic.

Anthony Duffy—Sharkey, because he licked Maloney twice, and can do it again.

Simon Flaherty—Sharkey.

Nat Rogers—We got a great show over at the Queensboro next week; despite this, Sharkey is my choice.

Lou Brix—I'm a Lithuanian, who can I see but Sharkey?

Tom McArdle—It will be a wow,

Leonard, Loughran, Dundee Pick Maloney; McTigue, Johnston, Billy Gibson Pick Sharkey

Hardly more than once, if ever, has a fight had the boxing fraternity more het up than tonight's imbroglio between those Boston heavyweights, Jimmy Maloney and Jack Sharkey.

Tommy Loughran

Benny Leonard

Johnny Dundee

The boxers are so evenly matched that very few of the fans are willing to comment on the shindy, most of them sending off their inquirers with, "It's a tough fight." A few of the more audacious boys predict the fight will end in a draw.

To show how the sport lovers differ on tonight's affair we print the selections of six of the ablest exponents of fisticuffs in the business. Three of these favor Maloney, while the remaining three have cast their ballot for the lithe Lithuanian.

Jimmy Johnson

Billy Gibson

Mike McTigue

The Maloney rooters in the said sextet are just as familiar with both battlers as the next fellow. And why shouldn't they? Here, take a look at the names of the three who are plunging on Jimmy: Johnny Dundee, world's featherweight champion; Benny Leonard, retired world's lightweight title holder, and Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia wizard—who, incidentally, will cover the fight for GRAPHIC readers.

The three who are picking Sharkey to emerge victorious are also reputed to be the best judges of boxing extant. Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, is one of the trio of Sharkey rooters. Billy's been affiliated with fisticuffs for a long number of years, having brought Benny Leonard to the lightweight title among other things.

Mike McTigue, who has seen fighters come and go, is another who is picking Sharkey to win. It was erroneously reported in yesterday's GRAPHIC that Mike was stringing along with Maloney, but it isn't so, says Mike. The other Sharkey rooter is Jimmy Johnston.

Sprint Duel May Dim Paced Feature At 'Drome Tonight

By ARCHIE MacMILLAN

A sprint duel between Avanti Martinetti and Charley Winter will run the motor-paced feature at the New York Velodrome tonight a close second. It is suspected that the little Italian may romp away with the American sprint championship this season, and consequently more than the usual degree of interest is attached to his efforts.

Since opening up his American campaign, Martinetti has trounced Grenda, lost to Fred Spencer and captured the one-third-mile national championship, and is a slight favorite to toss Winter out of the way tonight.

Being one of the few native born New Yorkers in the cycle racket, Charley has a legion of admirers here, and there will be quite a mob rooting for his success against the redoubtable son of Italy tomorrow.

The pair will test their prowess in a regulation one-mile match race tonight, the best man taking two out of three heats. Although the Americans have it all over Martinetti in the matter of jockeying, sheer speed alone has helped the Italian to victory.

A Private Fight

In the twenty-mile motor-paced race tonight it looks like a private fight between Franco Giorgetti and Vincent Madonna, with Bobby Walthour and George Chapman filling up space.

Madonna's sudden return last Tuesday night to the form that made him great has made the fans perk up their ears, and it will create quite a furor if he is able to outspeed the young and energetic Giorgetti tonight. Walthour only made one unimpressive start on the New York track as a motor-paced rider and he will have to show considerable improvement tonight if he is to garner the respect of the local fans.

There will be a number of interesting races on the card tonight, in one of which the well-known Orlando Piani will hook up with George Dempsey, an Australian.

Expert Staff, Including Sharkey, To Cover Fight for GRAPHIC

Fight fans who like their fight news served red hot are requested to read tomorrow's GRAPHIC for the finest, most accurate accounts of the ring skirmish between Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey at the Yankee Stadium tonight.

Ed Sullivan

An all-star cast of experts will cover the event for this paper. Topping the crew is Jack Sharkey, one of the principals.

Sharkey will write an exclusive story of the fight itself. Tommy Loughran, regarded as the leading contender for the light heavyweight title, and Johnny Dundee, featherweight monarch, are assigned to cover the bout from the same angle.

Jim Jennings

The dressing-room yarn will be provided by Ed Sullivan, sports editor of The GRAPHIC. Ed's pen has been tuned up for the occasion. Readers, therefore, know what is in store for them.

Jim Kahn, baseball scribbler, possessed of boundless wit and humor, is to turn in a story of the crowd and all that happens outside the ring.

Jim Jennings' critical eye will follow every move, every maneuver made by the fighters. He will give a clear, detailed report of each and every round.

Gus Edson and a staff of camera men will be on hand to cover the bout from a picture angle.

By JACK SHARKEY

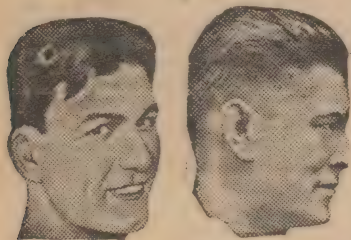

(Copyright, 1927, The New York Evening GRAPHIC. All rights reserved.)

When Jimmy Maloney is carried through the ropes this evening it will be his last appearance in the ring.

He has set himself a financial goal of $150,000. He will have it when he receives his purse for this fight.

Jimmy never liked the ring, and after our last fight he retired to the fish business, where his mental and physical resources were equal to the demands upon him.

He does not care for the irksome training periods. He loves pleasure.

Jack Delaney

and will not punish himself as he should to bring out his best physical attributes.

The large layers of fat he carries about his middle in every fight prove this. You never saw a perfect athlete carry the unnecessary poundage he does.

Did he ever show any fire or dash in his fighting, or did you ever see him take a chance? He might have stopped Delaney but for fear of Jack's right hand.

Predicts Maloney's Retirement

Jimmy would rather be anywhere than in the ring. Now that he has enough money to live comfortably, he will retire from fisticuffs willingly.

Some of his former fights might make interesting reading some day.

These are not the words of a braggart. Jimmy Maloney fights his last fight tonight, and he will be a wreck when I finish him. I said I would lick Wills and stop McTigue. I did.

I'll keep my word in regard to Maloney tonight.

The first thing my friends asked me, after the postponement of the fight was announced, was how I felt about it.

How would you feel if you had $100,000 kept out of your paws by a rainfall, with the sucker Maloney all set to take his ring shower of gloves?

I understand that he did not sleep well last night, even though Dan Carroll kept reading him bedtime stories from Boccaccio.

Dan had to keep walking him around the city all day so that he would not collapse before he retired.

Jim is of that dull, stolid type who still believes in fairies, Santa Claus and the stork, and the least reaction throws his whole system into a rust.

About newspaper stories, now I ask anybody who knows Jimmy Maloney, if they believe that he wrote the story which appeared under his name in a morning paper.

Jim has to think ten minutes before he is able to say "yes" or "no." Unlike Tunney, I can't tell a consonant from a phonograph, but I know Maloney never wrote that story. He signs his name with an ice pick dipped in ink.

Hopes Jim Stands Strain

I do hope he don't snap under the strain tonight, and, to be frank, it is a strain to any fighter when he is on edge, waiting to go, to have a battle called off.

You are all set and the unexpected wait affects the nerves of the best of ringmen.

After drying out and making other sacrifices we have to endure before a contest, we hate to go through the same stunts all over again.

This additional day will aid me more than it will Maloney.

The cut at the edge of my right eye has entirely healed, and the eye will be as good as ever when I enter the ring.

Maloney has trouble holding his weight to its correct point, and he might add more poundage than he can afford to carry.

I am grouchy myself today, which is an indication that I am fit and razor fine.

(Sharkey will give his version of the fight tomorrow.)

Gene Off for Camp Shortly

Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, will expert at the match between Jack Sharkey and Jimmy Maloney at the Yankee Stadium tonight and then leave here tomorrow or Sunday for Tom Luther's place at White Sulphur Springs, where he did his preliminary training for the Dempsey match.

Gene will take along several sparring partners and a group of friends. He will golf, fish and hike for a week, after which he will begin training. Gene is rather beefy at present and wants to work off some of the spare flash.

McHugh Day Will Not Pass Unnoticed

Ed Sullivan's SPORT WHIRL

They'll Be Squawking Very Soon

THE New York state boxing commish has one ruling on the books which will shortly come in for a large share of discussion.

It is the ruling which prevents the champion of one class from fighting in the class above him.

The rule was designed for excellent reasons.

The commish felt that a champion in one class, if so inclined, could flee to the protection of another division, where his title would not be at stake, rather than face the worthiest contenders in his own bailiwick.

When Mike McTigue was matched to fight Tom Heeney, the New Zealander, in the opening show of the Coney Island Club, the first faint rumbles were heard.

"Why is it that McTigue can go out of his class and fight Heeney?" queried the fight fans, recalling that Delaney was barred from fighting Paulino.

The rule, as phrased on the books, specifically states that only a champion of a division is barred from engaging men in the class above him. It does not apply to those fighters who hold no title.

To the fight fans, always suspicious of Jimmy Johnston's influence or alleged influence, it appears that a joker was purposely left in the boxing code to cover this emergency.

Actually nothing of the sort was intended.

However, you'll never convince boxing fans that Johnston is not getting a particular break here.

When James Joy Gets Hot

THERE have been occasions on which it appeared that Jimmy Johnston was getting more than an even break with the boxing bosses.

However, hear what Johnston himself has to say about it:—

"That reputation has done me more harm," says Jimmy, "than anything else.

"Every time I have a fighter scrapping locally, the fans are alert to discover favoritism to my fighter. You know that this is a fact.

"Fight fans reason strangely.

"I have never wanted any part of a bad decision in my favor. A bad decision only hurts the fighter in whose favor it is given.

"Remember the McTigue-Tiger Flowers fight?

"Peter Brady and Bernard Gimbel were the judges in that fight. They are two of the finest men in New York city. Men above reproach and thorough sportsmen. They gave the decision to McTigue and the fans went crazy with resentment.

"What happened? Did McTigue benefit by that decision?

"You know he didn't.

"However, the fans were so heated up over the thing that Flowers got a return fight in Madison Square Garden with Harry Greb and won the middleweight title.

"Flowers, instead of being hurt by the decision in the McTigue fight, was painted so successfully as a martyr that he got his chance to win a world's title."

"Influence Is a Myth"—Johnston

JOHNSTON, always a talker of parts, becomes particularly voluble when this matter is brought up.

He feels strongly on it and perhaps with justice.

"I suppose," and here Jimmy sneers a well-bred sneer, "that it was my influence with the commish that has made Mike McTigue an idol with the boxing fans.

"Did McTigue need any influence to knock out Paul Berlenbach and put up a whale of a fight against big Jack Sharkey?

"If I had influence with the commish, why did I accept that Pat McCarthy match for Mike when every one warned us that McTigue would look bad against that cautious clown from Boston.

"I have always been on the level and I have never depended on this so-called influence that every one ascribes to me.

"I'm not kidding you at all when I say that this reputed influence I possess has handicapped me more than any other one thing.

"I don't know who started the report. If I did, I would willingly hit him with a sash weight. He has given me plenty of trouble and I don't mean maybe.

"Chairman Farley of the boxing commish is a good friend of mine. However, his friendship for me has never influenced any ruling. In fact Jim Farley would hesitate longer over doing a favor for me than he would over doing it for some one he didn't know. He knows that I am supposed to have this influence with the commish and for that reason he would not be apt to give me any concession that would bear out that view.

"Isn't that logical?"

Echo answers that it is very logical.

Heeney May Puncture McTigue Bubble

THIS writer is one of the few persons in New York city who concedes the lumbering Heeney a chance against McTigue when they open up the Coney Island Club.

Heeney is not the pugilistic tramp that some think.

He looked like a pretty fair sort of boxer against Paulino, even conceding the fact that Paulino is not so hot.

I doubt if McTigue can hurt Heeney.

On the other hand Heeney, powerfully constructed, might lay in a right hand that would hurt McTigue seriously.

McTigue, despite his sensational fighting of recent months, is not improving. He took a lacing from Sharkey that must have affected him.

Heeney, popularly regarded as a lamb being led to slaughter, may balk at the door to the abattoir and bite a few chunks out of those who would officiate as his executioners.

6,000 Schoolboy Athletes in P.S.A.L. Games Tomorrow

Tomorrow is Popgun Johnnie's day.

The gentleman irreverently referred to above is John J. McHugh, inspector of athletics of the Public Schools Athletic League.

The long-winded title, though, is only appended to official communications and is never used at any other time. To the world at large he is Popgun Johnny McHugh, the most famous starter of foot races in the world.

And tomorrow, when 6,000 schoolboy athletes begin their parade to the starting mark at 9 a. m. and continue this parade until 5 p. m., will be the happiest day of the year for Johnny.

It is the P. S. A. L. track and field championships and the fruition of Johnny McHugh's dream.

It was almost a quarter of a century ago that Johnny McHugh first conceived his dream of organized mass athletics for the growing boys in the schools—the citizenry of the next generation. Today the dream is a reality, and such a reality as has never been seen before in the world of sports. A miracle performed by himself and General George Wingate.

The P. S. A. L. track and field championships is the biggest one-day athletic meeting in the world. Greater than the national championships, greater than the Olympic Games. And it is all the handiwork of one man—Popgun Johnny McHugh.

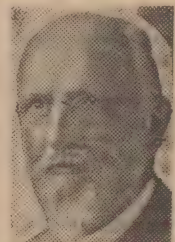

A Real Oldtimer

McHugh remembers twenty-five years ago, when he was quite a young man and full of enthusiasm for the task he had undertaken. That first meet he started. It was held in a school yard which was bounded by a brick wall. The boys ran in their stocking feet. The crouch start was as yet undiscovered and the lads braced themselves with one foot against the wall behind them to make a getaway. Johnny McHugh started the races by clapping his hands for the word "go."

It was Johnny McHugh who first introduced the innovation of starting the runners from in front of the mark. It all came about by accident, McHugh explained. At that time all races were started from behind the starting pits.

Johnny McHugh

General George Wingate

The brick fence bounded the field, and the runners, as usual, started from there with one foot braced against the wall. There was no room for the starter, so Johnny was forced to stand in front of the runners. Although few recognized it at the time, it was really an epochal moment. For right there Johnny McHugh discovered the advantages of the new style of starting. No runner could break from the mark before the word "go" without being caught. It is a common axiom that the last runner who "stole" on Johnny died twenty-five years ago. All starters everywhere in the world now use McHugh's style. It has long since passed out of the innovation class. It is accepted as the correct thing.

It is estimated by some that McHugh and started some 15,000 track and field meets. Johnny himself has no idea what the number is. At the last Olympic games Johnny McHugh was taken to Paris as chief starter. He has started every national championship, Penn relay, metropolitan championship, college championship, etc., ad infinitum, for more years than comes to memory.

By KENNETH D. SMITH

Ol' Memphis Bill Terry has crashed the five leading hitters' column. Bill has been crashing everything this year. First he crashed the regular line-up and then he began crashing apples all over Mr. Heydler's National League orchard. You can just picture Terry crashing something all the time. He probably breaks dishes in the pantry back in Memphis.

Lately Terry has become acquainted with Tammany Young, the Caliph of Gate Crashing and Ol' Bill may try to crash the gate at the fight tonight.

While Rajah Hornsby, Eddie Farrell and George Harper have been providing abundant clusters of hits dally at the Polo Grounds, Mr. Terry has seen to it that New York fans are served with those ripping, snorting, deadly hard-hit balls like Babe Ruth hits.

It's saying a lot, but it's a fact, there isn't anybody in the National League loop who hits a ball harder than Terry. He whacks them to all sections, but his favorite spot is deep center field. It's nothing for Bill to wham a ball so hard inside the Polo Grounds that he completes the circuit in time to score a homer. Lots of times these fiery liners don't fall safe, but they're always entertaining. Still, Terry has now climbed to a tie with Frankie Frisch in hitting .361, which means that a large share of those bullet hits of his are falling safe.

Terry says he was always as good as he is now, but of course never showed as well because he wasn't in the game long enough. If Terry continues this pace it's hard to see how any first baseman in the league is going to have the call over him. Bill is simply a bustin' fool, that's all. It's worth a trip uptown just to see him cork a ball on the nose. He has Long George Kelly backed off the map now and there's plenty of argument that he'll turn out to be better than Kelly in his prime.

On top of it all, Big Bill is fast. He can run with the best of them, and often gives the impression that he would have made a whale of a football player with his speed and bulk. He has an infielder's arm, quick at snapping the ball away with speed behind it. His pet play is starting double plays, a difficult feat for a first sacker.

Bill Terry

Terry is 29 years old and in the off season is proprietor of a gas filling station in Memphis.

Maloney, Sharkey Clash at Yankee Stadium Tonight

buy them off for the evening at an estimated cost of $3,000.

Sharkey appeared slightly peeved at the postponement, and did ten rounds of work at Stillman's gym. Bag punching, shadow boxing and calisthenics limbered him up, and after a rubdown by Tony Palazolla he visited his manager, Johnny Buckley, at the Hotel Astor.

Sharkey Worries Over Gate

Sharkey was worried more over the possibility that all the special trains and boats from Boston might not arrive for the match. He likewise thought that because the fight

Jack Dempsey

had been called off for one night a lot of customers might go home and dodge the match.

The gate receipts are bothering Jack more than the match. Maloney is out now, so far as he is concerned.

Maloney sneaked away for a workout in a private gym, took a long hike and went to bed early. He showed no concern over the postponement.

Unless it is raining at 2 o'clock this afternoon all the boxers on the bill will weigh in at the boxing commission office at that time.

The advance sale is $173,000 and if the weather turns clear and balmy Tex expects a gate of $325,000. Contrary to general impressions, neither of the boxers has a guarantee of $100,000, as announced. That's why they are so highly interested in the receipts.

Though the odds are quoted at 6 to 5 on Maloney, the betting is at even money.

Sharkey will win.

SLATTERY BOBS UP

Jimmy Slattery, the Buffalo light heavyweight, who looked like a world-beater until Dave Shade shoved him into obscurity with a knockout, is back again insisting on a shot at the title held by Delaney.

Jimmy will present his plea to the boxing commission when the latter body meets today.

Better Late Than Never Is Evening World Sport Slogan

The Evening World sports department has shown a charming disregard for newspaper ethics in connection with the Maloney-Sharkey fight.

The New York Evening GRAPHIC, starting last Monday, signed Jack Sharkey of Boston to write under his own signature up to and including tonight's fight.

The Evening World two days later awoke to the fact that here was the germ of a great idea.

So the Evening World, lacking Sharkey's signature, has been running its own Sharkey stories, which are apparently written after a huddle play which includes everybody but Jack Sharkey.

Boys will be boys, and the old-line newspapers, struggling to recover the circulation which the tabloids have wooed from them, still plug along two days in the rear of tabloid originality.

SILVERS MEETS LEONARD IN OPENING SHOW AT DEXTER PARK MONDAY

One of the greatest crowds that has ever witnessed a boxing contest at Dexter Park is expected to be on hand Monday night when Promoter Nick Sassi lifts the lid for the summer season. Local fans have shown much interest in the opening show, as the large advance sale indicates.

Marty Silvers, Brownsville's fighting featherweight, meets tough Allentown Johnny Leonard in one of the premier contests. Fight fans know that when two fighters of that type start punching a real treat is in store.

Lew Kersch, undefeated east side

Johnny Leonard

featherweight, will make his first appearance in a ten-rounder when he faces Billy Kennedy, New Orleans star, in another bout.

In the first star bout Jackie Cohen, popular Brooklyn bantam, faces Joey Karkish of Pittsburgh.

Moore Amazes in Relief Man Role on Eve of 30th Birthday—No. 9 for Gehrig

CLEVELAND, May 20.—This, the records in Boneta, Tex., show, is the thirtieth birthday of Wilcy Moore, amazing relief pitcher of the Yankees. However, Wilcy outwitted the old boy with the scythe and the hour glass by celebrating his birthday yesterday. The setting for the celebration was the opening game of the series between the Yankees and the Indians. The weather was bad. The crowd was small. Yet that didn't bother Wilcy in the least.

Wilcy Moore

He outpitched Garland Buckeye in a close game from the moment he entered it in the second inning as a relief man for Urban Shocker, and in the ninth inning he won it by rolling a bunt toward first base with Joe Dugan on third and a squeeze play ordered. Any celebration he might put on today would be an anti-climax. From the standpoint of the rest of the Yankees, at any rate.

Has Faced Every Club

This was the twelfth game in which Moore has figured for the Yanks this year and his record of four victories and two defeats does not begin to indicate the value of his contribution to their success. He has pitched against every club in the league within little more than a month of the opening of the season, and if this isn't a record for a recruit surely it ought to be. He is the handiest pitcher Miller Huggins has had at his disposal since he took command of the Yanks. Folks used to wonder what Hug would do this year without Garland Braxton. Now they know. Moore can pitch as well or better than Braxton and he can do it twice as often.

There were two other features of the opening skirmish with the Indians that were very gratifying. One was Lou Gehrig's ninth home

The Sodas Were On Ruby, but She Was A Pretty Girl

Ruby Goldstein, the east side youngster who aspires to the lightweight title, has always been a shy, retiring chap in the ring.

Last night, however, Ruby, very cheery and masterful, plowed his way into Appleton's drug store, at West 45th Street and 8th Avenue, with a nice chubby young miss attached to that terrific right of his and ordered up chocolate sodas for two. Unmindful of the busybodies giving him the heavy stare, he took his poison with the aplomb of any 8th Avenue cowboy.

Are you contemplating matrimony, Ruby?

run of the season, made in a dash around the bases following a screeching drive to the center field fence. The Indians relayed the ball back to the plate quickly but Gehrig, surprisingly fast for a big man, arrived just ahead of it. The other was the delivery of two hits by Dugan, one resulting, as aforementioned, in the winning run.

No Doubt It Is True

Joe has had a tough time of it this spring. First he was spiked, then he bobbed up with a lame back. The layoff while his spike wound was healing and the lameness in his back put a crimp in his batting form and only lately has he been swatting the ball solidly.

Lou Gehrig

Urban Shocker

Many of his solidest swats have been bagged, but yesterday he got two of them through the enemy lines, much to his own relief and the rejoicing of his teammates.

Chance Shot Is Favored in Freeport Handicap

Easy Going for Celidon Is Expected in Baldwin

BELMONT SELECTIONS

First Race—Turkey's Neck, Henrietta Wildair, Miss Boyd.
Second Race—Reminder, Belair entry, Young Prince.
Third Race—Celidon, Montferrat, Cartoonist.
Fourth Race—Chance Shot, Crystal Pennant, Watkinson.
Fifth Race—High Flier, Rancocas entry, Greentree entry.
Sixth Race—Scat, Korean, Friday 13th.

By MICHAEL W. CASALE

Chance Shot, brother of Chance Play which romped home with the Toboggan Handicap yesterday, will make his first appearance of the year under silks in the Freeport Handicap of seven furlongs at Belmont Park this afternoon. He's a pipe to celebrate the occasion with a win. Has little to trim and the heavy package of 127 pounds should not stop him. As a final prep for this race the classy colt stepped five furlongs in 1.02 4-5 under double wraps. Crystal Pennant has been going along at a nice clip in his training trials and appears ready for action. I think he will finish as good as second. Watkinson got off to a bad start in his last at Jamaica and was running over horses at the end. He'll improve here. Give him the show. Clearance didn't look so good last time out. Teheran is outclassed.

The running of the Baldwin, for 3 year olds and up at one mile and a sixteenth, should result in a victory for the Rancocas stable's consistent Celidon. 'Twas a shame to see Celidon lose that last race. He was much the best. Ill racing luck robbed him of the decision. With clear sailing here Celidon should redeem himself with a bang. The one to fear, from all appearances, is the much improved Montferrat. The latter took the measure of Banton, Jopagan and Rip Rap at Pimlico and is reported dead fit. Cartoonist is dropping considerable weight and is always to be reckoned with. Priceman for what is left.

Turkey's Neck May Repeat
Twenty-two youngsters will start the ball rolling in the four-and-a-half-furlong Woodmore Claiming Stakes, through the Widener chute. An open thing if ever there was one. Turkey's Neck impressed me when she won easily at Jamaica. She may be good enough to repeat. Henrietta Wildair and Miss Boyd are both capable of winning off their top form. The Lure is a corking turn of early speed, but isn't coming on the stay. The Cossack is improving with each start. Bookie and Polls have been working well. The Riverhead, second on the bill, will bring together a field of 3 year olds and up over the mile route. From where I sit the contest appears to be a tickler. Reminder, with four seconds in a row, gets the call by a shade, despite the fact he must pack 120 pounds, sixteen more than last time. Flambino and Sun Hawk, paired as the Belair entry, loom as the contenders. Young Prince may prove troublesome if he runs to his impressive trials. Breezed a half in 48 4-5 for this race. Post Time will never do with Jockey Fewell in the saddle.

Watch High Flier!
Better watch James Butler's High Flier in the fifth event, a dash of four and a half furlongs over the Widener course. I think she will surprise the talent. She turned in a smashing trial on Wednesday when she clicked off three furlongs in the sensational time of 34 4-5. All she needs is a break in racing luck. Sublevado and Beowulf, coupled as the Rancocas stable entry, are ready for brackets, and indications are that Uncle Sam Hildreth will make a gallant stab for the biscuits. Iron Crown, Humdinger and Ephesian all hail from the Greentree barn. They are strong possibilities. Of the others I string with Kirkover.

Scat, fit and 'arin', stands out in the nightcap. He will have Korean and Friday 13th as his chief opponents.

Tickets to Kenny Show Going Fast

The advance ticket sale for the monster Catholic Boys' Clubs bouts, which Ed J. Kenny will stage at the Polo Grounds June 15, is going great guns. Assemblyman Peter Hamill, chairman of the ticket committee, reports the receipt of $80,000, with the show almost a month off. Most of the gladiators have begun light training. Ruby Goldstein and Sid Terris, who clash in the final number, will do their preliminary work at outdoor camps. Ace Hudkins, Nebraska Wildcat, who is paired with Sergeant Sammy Baker in the semi-final ten, will get a tune-up bout with Al Mello. The second ten will bring together Billy Wallace and Billy Petrolle. Jackie Fields, conqueror of Champion Sammy Mandell in ten no-decision heats, goes to the post against Louis (Kid) Kaplan, former feather king. The four-round opener will bring together Jimmy McNamara and Jackie Donohue.

THE FEATURE OF THE INITIAL CARD yesterday at Belmont Park was the Toboggan Handicap, contested in rain and a field of mud, won by Chance Play, with Earl Sande in the saddle, shown above going over the finish line. Sarmaticus, with Pony McAtee up, finished second, and Pompey, with Coltletti up, third. Unfavorable weather conditions hurt the attendance.

ILL HEALTH CAUSE OF PITCHER'S SUICIDE

ST. PAUL, MINN., May 13.—Ill health is believed to have been the cause of the suicide of Eddie Meade, local American Association pitcher, who was found dead in his room. Nick Allen, manager of the local club, recently announced he thought Meade was through for this year owing to his poor condition.

but, since I am a matchmaker, I can't go on record. I'll tell you the winner tomorrow.

Marty Forkins—Maloney all the way.

Irvin Cobb—Sharkey is my selection. He's too smart.

Gertrude Lawrence—Sharkey is okay with me. I think he is better than Joe Beckett, re'lly, I do.

Vic Scutari—I like Johnny Grosso, but he's not in the final. I'm down on Maloney for six "C's."

Eddie Foy—Sharkey. Too much class.

Sam Harris—Sharkey. Terry could have beaten both of them in the same ring.

Eddie Leonard—Sharkey is sweeter than apple cider to me. He'll pop Maloney on the chin until he has roly-poly eyes.

Eddie Dowling—How can they beat a real Irishman like Maloney? He'll win as he pleases.

Ted Healy—Sharkey is a cinch.

Phil Baker—Sharkey will fold up like an accordion. Maloney!

Sid Silvers—I'm the straight man for Phil Baker on this one.

Bill Duffy—Maloney after a hard fight.

Leo P. Flynn—I like Sharkey.

Francis Albertani—The last five rounds will win for Sharkey.

Johnny Attell—Sharkey will cake-walk in.

Charley Cook—Give me a sailor for a real fight. Sharkey will outlast Maloney and grab the duke.

Nick Sassi—Sharkey; it won't be a fight; just a slaughter.

Low Raymond—Already I bet four White Owls on Sharkey to grab the decision.

Young Jack Sharkey—All the Sharkeys, whether Italians, Irish or Lithas, are great battlers, the name makes 'em fight; Sharkey in a walk.

Arthur Yende—Sharkey will win by decision.

Tom Fahy—Sharkey fought my Golden Boy, Jack De Maye, and trimmed him; he's the only guy living who could; Sharkey's boxing skill will win.

Jack De Mave—Sharkey is a pipe. Abe Yeager—Me for the Irishman every time. I know my matzoths. Maloney's a breeze.

Doc Bagley—The distance is too great for Maloney. Sharkey will come fast in the last six rounds to win.

Jack Moore—Sharkey, that's all.

Jack Gorman—Delaney could trim both of them when right. Sharkey is a cinch.

Phil Coughlin—Maloney, Maloney, Maloney!

Dorothy Jennings—If the decision is just, it will end in a draw.

Harry Dell—Sharkey.

Eddie Huffman—Sharkey. I fought him and know.

Abe Goldstein—Maloney is underrated. He should win tonight.

Mike McTigue—Sharkey.

Jimmy Johnston—Sharkey, and by a knockout, too.

Pete the Goat—Sharkey.

Walter C. Kelly—Maloney. The other fellow is a Virginia ham.

Francine Larrimore—Sharkey will open in one and will hold the spot all the way.

'Flyin' Fool,' Confident, Hops Off on Paris Flight

man at the stick. He waved an arm at the onlookers, threw on a little more power and the Spirit of St. Louis left the ground.

A battery of motorcycle policemen tried vainly to keep up with the plane in its progress down the runway, which extends for nine-tenths of a mile. They were there to keep the crowds in check. Motors and hundreds of people swarmed down in the wake of Lindbergh's machine.

Watchers Shudder

Suddenly, the Spirit of St. Louis was seen to drop back and a shudder of fear swept through the onlookers.

"Can he get off?" That was the question on everybody's lips, and Lindbergh himself answered it the next second.

The plane once more was pointed out, gained a bit of speed, and then cleared the trees like a grace-socks, khaki breeches and a gray shirt, open at the neck.

Plane Looks Tiny

The Spirit of St. Louis, rolled out from its hangar, looked tiny when compared to the great America, which had taken the air for a test flight a few minutes before. So small was it that ordinary red gasoline cans were used to pour gas into the tanks, cans filled from the huge drums which filled a motor truck drawn up near the take-off.

Sky Leadens Gray

The sky was leaden gray, and many believed that the report that Lindbergh was out make a start would prove untrue. It seemed as if rain might break through the low-hung clouds at any minute. But "Lucky" knew what he was about. He had been informed that the ocean storms of the past few days were lifting, and that was all he wanted to learn.

And after he had faded into the gray sky, bound, perhaps, for either fame or death, those who remained behind admitted that Lindbergh had guessed the situation perfectly.

Praised by Byrd

"That take-off was beautifully done—beautifully done," exclaimed Commander Byrd.

"That boy knew what he was doing all the time. Well, he's gone now, and may God be with him."

A brief pause and the gallant commander, with renewed cheerfulness, voiced the aviator's usual philosophic observation:—

"He's got lots of gas."

Has Plenty of Gas

Byrd declared Lindbergh had gas enough to carry him for five hours more than the time he estimated it would take him to get to Paris.

Lieut. Noville, another member of the America's crew, also praised the skill with which the lone pilot hopped off. Just before Lucky gave his little ship the gun a mechanic who had worked on it throughout the night stepped up to bid him good-by. The pilot shook hands with his aid, and as the plane gathered speed down the runway the mechanic put his hands to his greasy face and wept like a baby.

St. Louis Man Pleased

But of the big crowd, none was better pleased or more enthusiastic over the auspicious start than C. J. Stumpf, representing the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the flight. Previously he had denied that Lindbergh had gone back stage at last night's performance of Rio Rita.

"He might have," Stumpf said laughingly, "if he hadn't read the weather reports first."

Asked if Lucky hadn't spent hours pouring over charts, he smiled in a way which implied that the nonchalant youth had not bothered with such mere details in the game where his life is the pawn.

Harold Kincaid of the Wright Aeronautical Company and Edward Mulligan, the chief engineer, expressed the belief that Lindbergh will succeed in reaching Paris. Both had pronounced the plane in first class shape.

Nungesser Grins At Air Disaster whole nose of the plane nung by a few pieces of twisted aluminum.

Thus it is, I know, that if there is one-millionth chance of any man coming out of the skies of Labrador one of these days, that superflyer will be Nungesser.

It would be just like him to land on some remote bay up there and work for weeks, with possibly the help of fishermen, to put his plane into shape to fly again.

Tomorrow Gilbert E. Gable tells how Nungesser risked his life with a smile in the first of his amazing wartime exploits.

Flying Field Muddy

But to the great throng strewn about the field and surrounding country each of those sixty seconds seemed as so many hours.

Flying experts agreed that Lindbergh took off in what they described as the worst of field conditions. The runway was a veritable sea of mud. It was this mire which resulted in the slowness of the start.

"He can't get off at that speed. He's going too slow."

"Why doesn't he stop?"

Flyer Calmest of All

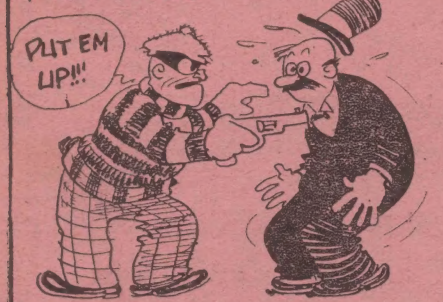

These were some of the exclamations which arose on all sides as Lindbergh bumped along before he succeeded in getting into the air.

In the thousands gripped firmly in the vise of tense excitement Lindbergh was the calmest. He had been, from the time of his arrival at the field until he disappeared in the haze.

As he entered the hangar he was dressed more for a round of golf than an overseas flight. He wore low, light brown shoes, gray golf

Nothing

Truth

Charlie Is Off!

CHARLIE LINDBERGH is off on his transatlantic hop.

The hopes and prayers of Americans accompany him.

May he win!

Above all, may he not be lost.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the young aviator was not hustled into needless danger by the criticisms of a handful of cheerful idiots.

These gentlemen have been full of advice.

Their advice has been equally full of bunk.

In their vivid but twisted imaginations the air voyage across the ocean is easy.

It is nothing of the sort.

The transatlantic hop is a desperately dangerous enterprise.

Far from a possible success, it is likely to end in disaster.

Airplanes are not yet built of sufficient strength and power to endure the terrific strain.

There is only one chance in a thousand of victory.

And to make even that one chance possible, wind, weather and machinery have to combine in a unison of perfection.

A sudden tempest, a few moments, of freezing rain, a speck of carbon on a spark plug might send the plane tumbling out of the skies into the deep, dark, cold waters of the Atlantic.

Thoughtless advice to start flying regardless of conditions is an invitation to brave men to risk their lives.

And those who, like Charlie Lindbergh, step gallantly into peril, are greater heroes than all those whose entire activity with flights consists of giving flighty advice.

Create the office of a public defender, whose business will be to defend any one arrested who is unable to pay for proper defense.

blood, and how, as a climax, on Easter Monday, thousands of Florida men, women and children watched the bestial strangulation of Charlie Perelli.

Such is the state of affairs in Florida, whose inhabitants are afraid that their "religion" might not stand the test of facts.

The truth is, of course, that REAL religion would have nothing to fear from truth.

And real religion would show its presence NOT by bills in the Legislature, but by mercy for the friendless and love for humanity.

Patent Medicine

WORD comes from Erie, Pa., that a man was cured of deafness by a crack on the head from a flying golf ball.

The shot knocked him unconscious, but when he came to he could hear again.

It's a safe bet that the man who walloped the ball heard something.

But, joking aside, golf ball treatment for deafness is about as likely to effect cures as is the average run of dopes and pills for other forms of ailments.

Wonder if any one has patented the idea?

Defending New York

THE "Blue" defenders have saved New York city from the peril of invasion by the "Blacks."

Thus ends the play warfare that was directed in practice against New England.

An "enemy" army of 20,000 men was crushed.

A powerful fleet was outgeneraled by the guardian force and was cut off from contact with the men it had landed.

All this has been good practice for our sailors, soldiers and marines.

It encourages American citizens to feel that no enemy can possibly land and conquer any part of American soil.

But when real war comes—if it ever does—it will rain down death and destruction from great fleets of airplanes in the sky.

That is the point that will have to be watched with all the skill of every branch of the service.

The only way to watch it is to build airplanes enough to patrol our great coast line and still be strong enough to battle off any possible enemy or combination of enemies.

Build the airplanes!

Care for the Sick!

WHATEVER may be the situation in the Department of Public Welfare, the people of New York will heartily indorse Mayor Walker's desire for proper care for the sick.

Whatever happens or doesn't happen to Commissioner Coler, the care of our helpless wards should be given first consideration.

And we think it will.

My Address to Our Health Authorities

To the Convention of the American Medical Association now in session at Washington:—

The health of the American people is in your charge. Your organization is responsible for the physical, mental and even moral condition of the various units.

No one will doubt that marvelous progress has been made in medical science in the last few years. It has largely removed itself from the medicine bottle. Pills and powders are losing their charm.

The great physicians of your organization are accepting the health-building principles that are foreign to drugs and noxious poisons.

But the patients of these progressive physicians have opportunities that are denied to the ordinary people.

The science which these men have finally built up through long experience is open to those who can pay the big fees which these experts demand.

But the great mass of American people still have to depend upon a Latin prescription that sends them to the drug store.

I hope the time will come when, within and without the allopathic profession, the present chaotic condition of the various methods used in your healing world will be remedied.

There should be definite and dependable means of determining the value of remedial measures.

Proper publicity should be given to health measures that are of interest to the general public.

The ethics of the allopathic doctors which deny them publicity should be radically changed.

It is only by publicity that knowledge is broadcast.

A good doctor should have the same right to herald the value of his particular procedure that is given to members of other professions.

But in the name of the public and for the benefit of the public health I plead with your august body to adopt some method of passing along to your physicians everywhere the invaluable knowledge that is now being used, in drugless healing, by the great physicians within your own ranks.

It seems to me, in view of the uncertainty of medical knowledge, as of all human knowledge, the world should be given the benefit of methods and treatment that have proved themselves of benefit. The dogmas and theories of medicine are ever changing. May we not properly hail and encourage the theories of a Doctor Lorenz, which, as practiced by him, have manifestly for today at least alleviated much suffering and disability throughout the world? And there are others.

They recommend scientific dieting; they make free use of vital building methods found in stimulating exercises, massage, electricity, hydrotherapy, etc.

Such methods are a closed book to the great body of allopathic physicians.

And the policy adopted by your association of ignoring other healing methods must be changed if you expect to retain your present authority in guiding the health of the American people.

Your competitors are unorganized—sometimes incompetent—and they are helpless to compete with you.

But those who are invested with extraordinary powers should respect its source.

You are recognized everywhere as the guiding force in the health development of the American people.

Every means that can be adopted to add to the physical power of this nation should be extolled by your members.

Individual financial advantages should be thrust aside in the interest of the powerful organization which you represent.

The general principles adhered to in the cure of disease dictated largely by natural instincts should be investigated and used by the members of your profession.

The value of the settled policy of feeding to keep up one's strength, of putting patients to bed when they are ill—and many other phases of medical practice—regardless of the demands of human instinct, should be investigated.

There should be within the ranks of your organization a committee whose entire time should be given to investigating remedies of all kinds with a view of presenting to the public the truth, based on experience, in reference to them.

And all commercialism of every kind should be disassociated with it.

This committee should invite information about remedial measures, regardless of its source—allopathic or otherwise—with a view to giving the public, or at least the members of your organization, the latest knowledge in progressive healing.

Disease is caused mostly by the abuse of the physical organism. This definite fact should be broadcast everywhere. And it is the duty of your organization to point out to the public their mistakes. They look to you for this service.

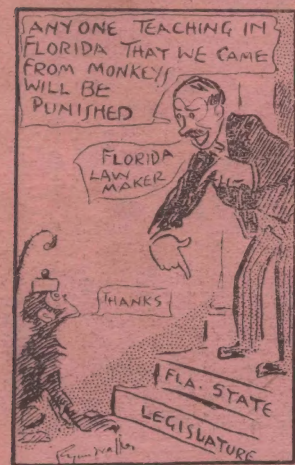

Though it may take money from individual doctors to prevent disease, as long as you are invested with your present authority it is a duty you should not evade.

Bernard Macfadden

Down in Florida—

THE House of the Florida Legislature yesterday passed a bill making it unlawful to teach in any public school anything about evolution.

A group of narrow-minded legislative bigots think they can preserve what they call "religion" by abolishing science.

That is just the sort of thing one might have expected of Florida.

It is a section of the United States steeped in partisanship, intolerance and reaction.

GRAPHIC readers cannot forget how lawyers of that state demanded outrageous retainer fees before they would consider appearing in defense of a poor, crazed boy who had been condemned to die because of local prejudice.

They will remember, too, how Mrs. Rose Bres volunteered to defend this boy against his swarm of enemies. How she procured an affidavit that the condemned boy was hopelessly insane. How, in spite of this, the vengeful citizens of Florida demanded his
